New power line will threaten trees in park

Construction of a 34,000-volt transmission line along the Missouri Pacific railroad tracks by Missouri Utilities Co. will mean that some trees in American Legion Park will have to be cut down and others will have to be severely trimmed.

The transmission line will run along the north side of the tracks, 52 feet from the center.

Louie Irvin, Manager, of Missouri Utilities district office in Charleston and Bill Likens, manager of the firm's electrical engineering of office in Cape Girardeau, met Tuesday with the Chamber of Commerce to explain the company's plans and combat the opposition to the line by the chamber and city government.

Instead, the revelation that the trees in the southern half of the park would be cut down may have caused even more opposition to the line.

Recognizing the opposition to the line, Irvin promised that the firm would review its plans to see if the trees could be saved.

The park issue was raised by Councilwoman Mary Doggett, who also chairs the chamber's Betterment Committee.

Our first concern was with the view along Malone Avenue, she said, with another line of utility poles along the tracks.

Then the committee discovered the plans for the park.

"The city can't stop them(from cutting the trees), because they're on railroad right-of-way," she said.

In fact, the whole park is owned by the railroad.

"They've given us the right to mow it," City Manager Charles Church explained.

Chamber members expressed surprise; most had thought the city owned the park.

The transmission line will replace an aging 30,000 transmission line which meanders through the northern part of Sikeston, Irvin said.

Construction on the project is expected to start soon. It will take about four weeks to complete the work in Sikeston, and another one or two months to run the new lines to Morehouse.

The new line will follow Malone Avenue from the Moore Avenue substation to Morehouse. The current line wanders from the Moore Avenue substation to Jaycee Street where it then follows Highway 114 to Morehouse.

Irvin listed the advantages of the new line: It will be more reliable than the old line and will carry an increased electrical load. It will use new slim profile poles with short arms instead of long crossbars.

The current line needs braces and guide wires every time it turns a corner and it runs through many more trees than will have to be cut at the park, he added.

"The Mo-Pac route is ideal from an engineering standpoint," Irvin explained.

More reliability and an increased load capacity will be needed for the new Himmilberger-Harrison plant being built in Morehouse, he said.

The Sikeston Board of Municipal Utilities had planned to string their power lines along the same poles, called underbuilding, once the new line was constructed. But not anymore.

E.R. "Dick" Inman, director, said he was all in favor of underbuilding the line until he discovered the route would run through the park.

At least one tree, an American Elm on the west side of the park and perhaps others will ha ve to be removed and the row of Pin Oak trees will have to have their south side trimmed extensively, Inman said, adding that the city will be the one that has to do the trimming.

"That's a good way to be tarred and feathered and run out of town," he said.

Inman suggested the new line follow the old route until it reaches the McKnight-Keaton Building and then swing west along the tracks.

Irvin said he did not think it would be very practical to rebuild the existing route, although it would be possible to do so.

Despite the construction of the new power line, many of the old poles will not come down, Irvin said. They will still be needed to carry service lines to Missouri Pacific customers.

The power line cannot be buried because of its high voltage, he said.

Irvin said the company will look at the trees in the park to see if it can do something to save them.

"We don't want to do anything to the trees if we can avoid it," he said.

"We need to stop it somewhere," Mrs. Doggett said concluding the meeting. "If everyone who needs new lines puts in new poles, it just goes from bad to worse."

Industrial Building

Fielding Potashnick told the chamber that he had purchased the undustrial building being built on speculation by Ryan Construction Co.

He said owner Bill Ryan sold the building for personal, not business reasons.

Construction on structure was held up while the sale was under way, but work should be finished within 60 to 90 days, Potashnick said.

He said the building will be available for lease or purchase and that he will go anywhere and show it to anyone who was interested.

Sikeston is capable of supporting industries for both his building and the one being vacated by Medalist Industries Inc., he said.

"It would be nice to see another couple hundred people working in Sikeston," Potashnick said.

His building will be a shell building that will be finished to the buyer's specifications.

Special Awards

Jim Stallings told the members that the board has decided to give special service awards to area residents who have performed community service above and beyond the normal duties.

Chamber members were presented with a list of guidelines to be followed in nominating award winners.

The awards will be presented at general membership meetings and reviewed at the annual banquet.

Area Democrats displeased with patronage appointments

Trouble getting patronage jobs for Democrats, or at least the right Democrats, was on the minds of county committeemen from the Tenth Congressional District Democratic Committee when they met Tuesday night with Bill Mauer, state party chairman.

Mauer was at the Ramada Inn on the last leg of a state tour to familiarize himself with county party leaders and their problems.

The party leaders' problems seemed to be getting patronage jobs for those who had worked for the party last year.

Several county leaders told of how their county central committee had made appointment recommendations, only to have someone else named to the jobs. In some cases they hardly knew the people appointed, they said.

Some county leaders said Republicans were still holding jobs that should go to Democrats.

Butler County Democrats told Mauer that they had nominated a Teasdale supporter for a patronage position, only to have someone who had never worked for the party named to the post.

A similar situation occurred in Pemiscot County where a lackluster Teasdale supporter was appointed and the central committee's choice was passed over.

The local chairwoman called it "a bitter pill to swallow" for someone who worked hard for the ticket.

She said two other appointments were mishandled.

The Jefferson County chairman said he could not complain about appointments going to the wrong people: "We haven't gotten anything," he said.

He pointed out that county fee offices are still held by Republicans.

Scott County Chairman Ben Marshall III said he thought the county committee and Sen. John Dennis could work more closely so that local party members could learn about appointments from Dennis, rather than reading about them in the newspaper.

Dennis said it is embarrasing to represent eight counties on partronage jobs and have no one in the Governor's office tell him what is going on.

He added that things have begun to improve over the past six weeks, since Mauer took over the party leadership.

Mauer thanked the chairmen for their frankness. He said his goal was to make the state committee "better than ever before."

There are problems with patronage jobs that no one has seen before, he said.

A Supreme Court ruling in 1975 said a worker cannot be fired from his state job just because he belongs to the wrong party.

There may be some delay, he said, but promised "we'll get the job done."

He told the leaders that the state committee is $15,000 in the black.

Future fund-raising events will not be the Dollars for Democrats program used in the past.

He said 74 per cent of the money raised went to expenses. Mauer said he will recommend other ways of financing the party.

Milk truck burns

A milk truck overturned and burned at 5 a.m. today when it struck the rear of a piece of construction equipment at the intersection of Highway 62 and Blodgett Road.

The milk truck, driven by Jackie King, 27, of Route Two struck the rear of an elevator loader being towed behind a pickup truck driven by Cletus Marion Dannenmueller, 22, of Illmo, according to Miner town Marshal George Hart.

The loader is used to move roofing material to the top of buildings.

Hart said Dannenmueller was turning north onto Blodgett Road and had to swing wide to make the turn. The milk truck struck the rear of the loader, overturned and caught fire. It ended up in front of the service station on the southwest corner of the intersection. Both vehicles were westbound at the time of the accident.

The Miner Fire Department used its foam unit to extinguish the fire.

Job impact questioned

CHARLESTON – The U.S. Department of Labor wants to know by Aug. 5 if financial support of a Charleston nursing home will have an adverse impact on jobs.

Lincoln & Richardson Enterprises, Inc., Charleston, is among 19 firms in 15 states listed in a weekly compilation as having asked the Secretary of Agriculture for grants, loans, or loan guarantees to establish or improve facilities. Such financial assistance is authorized by the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act.

That statute requires the Secretary of Labor to determine if such assistance might result in the transfer of jobs from one area to another by the applicant. It bans financial help where such actions would increase unemployment.

Boy rides bike into truck

A nine-year-old Sikeston boy received minor injuries Tuesday when he rode his bicycle into the side of a pickup truck at the corner of Moore Ave. and Wakefield Street.

Mark Edward Arnold, 916 N. Ranney St., was treated for a head bruise and released at the emergency room of Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Public safety officers said the accident happened at 5:56 p.m. when the boy failed to stop at a stop sign on Moore Ave. and hit the right rear side of a westbound pickup truck driven by Terry Lee Alliston, 26, of 1904 Kentucky Rd.

There were no arrests, officers said.

Dexter job office to open Monday

DEXTER – Jack Keane, director of Missouri's Department of Industrial Relations, will officially open the new Stoddard County Office of the Division of Employment Security here at 10 a.m. Monday.

Keane, whose department contains the Division of Employment Security, will also tour selected industrial sites in Dexter and will speak before a group of industrial leaders and members of various county Chambers of Commerce at a noon luncheon.

Keane, who is an appointee of Gov. Joseph Teasdale, was instrumental in getting the new office for Stoddard County, according to State Rep. Gary L. Smith of Dexter, who is handling arrangements for the grand opening.

Smith indicated the Dexter office is the only new employment office to open in Missouri recently, which will be an independent office. The rapid industrial growth of Dexter is credited as the reason for the new office. Stoddard County residents now must use either Sikeston or the Poplar Bluff office for employment security matters.

The new office is located at 10 South Sassafras in Dexter, west of Rainey Funeral Home. The public is invited to the grand opening ceremony.

The fatality was the 52nd so far this year on Southeast Missouri roads, compared to 64 during the same period in 1976.

The fatal accident occurred at 8:10 p.m. Tuesday, three miles southwest of Puxico on Route T in Stoddard County.

Health board hears state budget report

BENTON – The Scott County Health Department Board of Trustees Tuesday heard a report on the 1977-78 state budget, which covers the period July 1, 1977 to June 30, 1978.

Warren Manning, administrator, told the board that he received the state budget from Joe Reichert, assistant director, State Division of Health, which now represents 27½ per cent of the county's health department salaries.

Manning said the amount to be reembursed by the state, $20,447 this physical year, compared to $17,500 for the 1976-77 physical year.

He said the increase this year is mainly due to the state removing the maximum amount to be paid, which last year totaled less than the 27½ per cent.

He said this was done through the efforts of state legislators and Governor Teasdale, according to a letter from Reichert.

The county's family planning program took a lot of the administrative time this month, with the clinic in negotiating a new contract at Jefferson City.

Manning said the contract will be returned as soon as it is signed by the director of the Division of Health and will allow the county $8,746.76 for the program in the coming year, with the county contributing one per cent, or $87.47.

Manning told the board that with a new law passed last year, titled Notice of Aggregate Valuation 1977, each political subdivision is required to hold a public hearing prior to setting a tax rate for the year.

The trustees decided to set the hearing for 3:30 p.m. Aug. 30 at the Scott County health Center in Benton.

Firebomb found in room

A fire bomb was discovered Tuesday in the bathroom of an apartment in a building at the corner of Luther Street and Compress Road, according to the Public Safety Department.

The incendiary device was discovered about 9:30 a.m. by Mark Johnson of Morehouse, who was working on the building.

Officers said he found a gasoline-filled plastic jug with a rolled-up newspaper in its mouth. The paper had been burned.

A gasoline-soaked pillow was also found and the wall next to it was burned, officers said.

Health board hears state budget report

BENTON -- The Scott County Health Department Board of Trustees Tuesday heard a report on the 1977-78 state budget, which covers the period July 1, 1977 to June 30, 1978.

Warren Manning, administrator, told the board that he received the state budget from Joe Reichert, assistant director, State Division of Health, which now represents 27½ per cent of the county's health department salaries.

Manning said the amount to be reembursed by the state, $20,447 this physical year, compared to $17,500 for the 1976-77 physical year.

He said the increase this year is mainly due to the state removing the maximum amount to be paid, which last year totaled less than the 27½ per cent.

He said this was done through the efforts of state legislators and Governor Teasdale, according to a letter from Reichert.

The county's family planning program took a lot of the administrative time this month, with the clinic in negotiating a new contract at Jefferson City.

Manning said the contract will be returned as soon as it is signed by the director of the Division of Health and will allow the county $8,746.76 for the program in the coming year, with the county contributing one per cent, or $87.47.

Manning told the board that with a new law passed last year, titled Notice of Aggregate Valuation 1977, each political subdivision is required to hold a public hearing prior to setting a tax rate for the year.

The trustees decided to set the hearing for 3:30 p.m. Aug. 30 at the Scott County health Center in Benton.

Firebomb found in room

A fire bomb was discovered Tuesday in the bathroom of an apartment in a building at the corner of Luther Street and Compress Road, according to the Public Safety Department.

The incendiary device was discovered about 9:30 a.m. by Mark Johnson of Morehouse, who was working on the building.

Officers said he found a gasoline-filled plastic jug with a rolled-up newspaper in its mouth. The paper had been burned.

A gasoline-soaked pillow was also found and the wall next to it was burned, officers said.

THE $6,000 GESTURE

President Carter's insistence that he pay $6,000 in 1976 income taxes even though, technically, he owed nothing as all was a laudable gesture.

But as a practical matter, the President had little choice. Imagine the outcry once it became known that the President's tax liability for 1976 (on an income of nearly $55,000) was exactly zero.

Had he not been in politics. Carter probably would have done as would the rest of us -- paid no income tax. And rightfully so. For his entire tax liability for the year ($11,675) was more than offset by a $20,865 investment tax credit on new equipment for the family peanut warehouse in Plains, Ga.

Carter's $6,000 gesture is actually another reminder that there still are too many ways -- all of them legal -- in which an affluent individual can avoid paying federal income taxes.

Congress did amend the tax code last year to impose a minimum tax in areas previously exempt from taxation. But it did not go all the way in this field.

Obviously, there is work still to be done. No set of deductions or exemptions should be permitted which allow high income individuals to escape paying at least a minimum tax to Uncle Sam.

Access To Legal Aid In Prisons

The U.S. Supreme Court's ruling that law libraries and legal help must be available to prisoners seeking freedom assured their continued access to the courts.

Observers have seen in those decisions a tendency by the high court to restrict access to the narrowest possible grounds. So, it is important that a majority of the court argued in this instance for a broadening of access. Justice Thurgood Marshall, who wrote the opinion for the six-member majority, emphasized that there is also a series of precedents for expanding prisoners' rights. And what the court has done is simply to set minimum standards for legal resources which should be available to the prisoners. The ruling requires that each prison system should have a law library for inmates to use, or provide assistance in the person of a lawyer or legal air.

Such requirements are not excessive, and even more importantly prison walls should not bar a person's access to the American system of justice.

Hearts Are Trumps

Driving through the Great Plains states, on our vacation, we stopped at a roadside cafe. As we rested, my wife and I shared our disappointment with the scenery. We'd found nothing to look at along the route. A truck driver sitting at the next table apparently overheard, but said nothing.

He left before us, but on a long, twisting slope, we soon caught up with him. We had no room to pass and so settled in line behind him. After a few minutes, we noticed his right turn signal was blinking . . . but there was no turn-off in sight. Puzzled, we looked around. My wife then noticed some antelope off to the right. Moments later, the truck's right turn signal blinked again. And we saw a massive and colorful rock formation. Some miles farther, the left signal alerted us to a golden eagle perched in a tree.

We stayed behind that trucker for several miles more, not even passing when we had the chance. He showed us more of nature's wonders than we could have imagined.

Noah's Flood

We were fishing our way around the U.S., towing a trailer and carrying a car-top boat. On the Gulf Coast of Florida it had been raining for several weeks. Late one Saturday night we pulled into a trailer park at Seminole. My husband disconnected the trailer so that I might attend an early Mass the next day.

Sunday morning in the rain I drove to a near-by church and parked as close to the sheltered entrance as possible. "Good morning, Father," I said, as I sloshed toward the porch. "I'm a visitor from California."

He smiled. "Good morning to you." Then pointing to the boat on top of my car, he asked, "Do you know something I don't?"

Another Answer For Juveniles?

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration reports that the cost of operating juvenile correctional institutions went up sharply from 1971 to 1974, though the number in such facilities dropped. The size of the discrepancy is puzzling, even when one fully takes into account the fact that the cost of almost everything was on the rise during the period.

In 1971, according to figures compiled for the LEAA by the Census Bureau, there were 54,729 juveniles in facilities for deliquents. Three years later the number had gone to 44,922. News accounts we have seen do not cite any. LEAA speculation as to the probable reasons for this large decline. Nor is anything reported as to why, with so many fewer held in detention centers and other facilities, the costs rose so dramatically, from $409,000,000 in 1971 to $483,000,000 in 1974. This figures out to $6989 apiece in 1970, and that rose to a whopping $10,339 by 1974.

Reasons for this aside, there is one thing about which there can be no doubt: Society pays heavily for the conditions that give rise to juvenile delinquency. Some benefits accrue to society, but a large proportion of that outlay goes for little more than warehousing of youngsters who have gotten into trouble with the law. It all adds up to a strong argument for devoting more resources to identifying and dealing with the causes of deliquency, which in the end might require spending far less on correctional institutions.

Another point can be made. There must surely be better ways of handling delinquents than institutionalizing them, and it appears likely that almost any alternative would be less expensive.

Nice Job!

The new hanging baskets are up around the Clinton square, having been re-furbished by volunteer work with the cost borne by various organizations in town.

They're a refreshing sight, even in this month when we have fresh flowers in our yards.

We wish we had a nice bubbly fountain or two around the square now and some more benches where folks could sit to rest a bit-and, maybe, before too long, we can have some trees planted along the sidewalk? Why not. Clinton has such a built-in asset in its nice, big square and every little thing to make it more attractive brings more shoppers into the community.

'GIVE' EM HELL, MCNARY' VETOES TRIBUTES TO TRUMAN

By ROBERT E. LUCKEN
Globe-Democrat Staff Writer

In his best "give'em hell, McNary" tradition, St. Louis County Supervisor Gene McNary has vetoes two bills relating to the late President Harry S. Truman.

The bills, adopted by the Democratic controlled County Council, would have named the Government Center Plaza "Harry S. Truman Memorial Plaza" and would have given the county's 4,000 employes a holiday on Truman's May 8 birthday.

Republican McNary, in his message to the council, said he suspects Truman "would have vigorously taken a legislative body to task" for the way the holiday bill was enacted.

He said the council did not bother to consult the Civil Srevice Commission, authorized to handle such matters, nor did it consider the 10 holidays already given to employes. One holiday, McNary noted, is a personal one and can be taken any day the employe chooses.

Further, McNary noted the government center was built during the administration of a Republican supervisor and a Republican-controlled council.

"Both determined it was in the best interests of our citizens not to resort to politics by naming the new government cent after famous Republicans," he said.

"To embark upon such a course at this time would lead to changing names with each political change in administration.

"While we all admire and respect the memory of a great Missourian, President Harry S. Truman, the St. Louis County Government Center, including its plaza, is the seat of county government and was designed for and must be preserved for the use of all its citizens," McNary said.

The Council, with a 4-3 Democratic majority, apparently lacks the fifth vote needed to override the veto.

The two new vetos bring to four the number McNary has issued on Democratic legislation-since the new majority took over Jan. 1.

Before disclosing his vetos, McNary had said Truman was one of his favorite presidents.

"I intend to do what he would have done."

FAMILY MATTERS

It had been ten years since the last reunion of my husband's family. The years had done their work. Infants had grown into children. Children had become teenagers. And those I remembered as teenagers were now bringing infants of their own. "Each family should introduce itself," I said to my husband, "so we know who everyone is."

He nodded in agreement and slipped off to talk to his cousins. Soon he returned. "It's all set," he told me. "right after dinner."

As we finished our desert, a man stood up and tapped his spoon against his glass for quiet. "It has been suggested," he bagan, "that we all introduce ourselves and I've been asked to start." He paused and look around. "Well, you all know who I am, and here at the table, with me is my family." And he sat down.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

The Final Conflict:
Business leaders unify politically, nationally for all-out showdown with Meany-Carter

WASHINGTON — In olden days -- about 1972 -- ponderous global and domestic matters would be decided when labor chief George Meany got out on the Burning Tree Country Club golf links with powerful cabinet members and even the President of the U.S. But Jimmy Carter doesn't play golf. And a recent check of Burning Tree doesn't disclose any Jody Powells or Hamilton Jordans among the new applicants.

So when Brothers Carter and Meany decided time had come to revamp the national labor law (NLRA) an aide of each president met over the tepid July 16 weekend in the White House. Laboriously, point by point, they worked out Jimmy Carter's "labor law reform" proposals to Congress--something no recent President has delivered.

There's a new cast of leading characters slowly emerging in this steaming town. So they're certainly worth putting on the record. Representing Jimmy Carter that July 16 weekend was a David Rubenstein, deputy to Stu Eizenstat, the President's assistant for domestic affairs and policy. And for Meany, there was labor's special counsel, Larry Gold.

Whenever Rubenstein and Gold stonewalled or sought clarification, Rubenstein would call Eizenstat at home. And Gold would check in with the increasingly influential 49-year-old Thomas Donahue, executive assistant to Meany. Take note of "young" Donahue, as they call him. Many say he'll be the AFL-CIO's second-in-command when Lane Kirkland succeeds Meany.

Then last Monday Jimmy Carter sent Congress his proposals for special alterations of the National Labor Relations Act which positively will help unions push into the South in one of their most sweeping organizing drives since the bloody '30s.

Swiftly American industry mobilized for the counterattack. Not even during the Lyndon Johnson or Jack Kennedy administrations had they faced such a united front of the White House and the House of Labor.

It was, and is, and will be for another year, political battalion against political battalion. Businessmen who had come to praise Mr. Carter now are organizing to bury him politically. And with him, inter the Democratic majority in the Congress.

Thus the political issue transcends even the labor law fight on which it pivots.

This will be industry's broadest-based counterattack in history.

"We will organize the broadest coalition ever put together by management in the history of battle on Capitol Hill," predicts Richard Creighton, assistant executive director of the Associated General Contractors. He and his AGC colleagues directed the businessmen's National Action Committee's recent famed successful battle against congressional passage of the extended picketing common situs bill, which labor lost.

But does industry, which is geared to production-management and lobbying, have the potential political expertise for a final conflict with such experienced, veteran infighters as Jimmy Carter and George Meany, not to mention the auto workers' president Doug Fraser?

Well, my inquiries reveal they are beefing up their battalions. According to the Federal Election Commission there now are some 500 corporate political action committees(PAC). And such giants as AT&T have signaled their operating companies that the time has come to get rolling. And soon Ma Bell itself will have its own national PAC. This comes some 32 years after the men's clothing union's late leader, Sidney Hillman, launched the first at Franklin Roosevelt's "suggestion." But industry is catching up.

Further, the battalions are turning into legions. There are some 375 trade association PACs. In this broad front of which Creighton talks will be the Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, the Associated General Contractors' 8,300 affiliated firms and 20,000 associate and affiliate members in 114 chapters.

And, for example, such trade outfits as the National Federation of Independent Business Inc., which alone has over 500,000 member firms. If they can market politics as they do air-conditioners, blenders, TV sets and autos, they'll have it made because their juices are up.

On July 27 some 400 leaders of commerce and industry will meet in the Capitol Hilton for the new coalition's first major anti-Carter-Meany strategy session.

Business targets come to far more than stopping the Carter-Meany "labor law reform" campaign and more than halting a Southern unionizing drive. First the management movement now wants to drub labor in its own ball park. It will be an all-star game.

And the men of management have two bills of their own which they hope to push through the Congress: the Employee Freedom of Representation Act of 1977, introduced by a former member of the AFL-CIO building and construction trades, Sen. Orrin Hatch (Utah) and Texas's John Tower. Says the 43-year-old Hatch: the intent of the bill is "to give individual employes the freedom of choice to join or refrain from joining labor unions or from financially supporting them, unless they desire to do so." And a similar bill now is in the House, introduced by Illinois's John Erlenborn and John Ashbrook of Ohio.

Thus industry is going eyeball to eyeball with labor and Carter. They'll be nose to nose right into the spring of the 1978 election year. I do believe it's make or break politically and perhaps industrially for both sides. One will bury the other, first in the Congress and then during the congressional campaign. Just watch.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

WHY STUDENTS WANT FEDERAL CONTROL

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

When Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N. J., conducted a poll of high school graduates, it discovered that 61 per cent do not believe in the profit system, 83 per cent estimate profits to be 50 per cent or more, and 55 per cent believe that the government should own all banks, railroads and steel companies.

When the Roper Public Opinion Research Center conducted a poll of college students, it discovered that 87 per cent believe business is too concerned with profits and not enough with public responsibility, 62 per cent believe that government should place stricter controls on business, 54 per cent favor government breaking up the big corporations into samller companies and 56 per cent believe that more government intervention is necessary to protect individuals from so-called "economic abuses" by business.

Students are not born with these ideas and they have not learned them from practical experience. These fallacies are what they have been taught in the schools, deliberately, systematically and pervasively.

If you want to have a firsthand look at how this is done, get a copy of the book called "A Working Economy For Americans," sponsored by the National Education Association and a consortium of environmentalists and others who believe that the federal government can provide the solution to all economic problems.

In this book promoted by the NEA, the profit motive is the bogeyman which has brought about "inequalities of wealth and income, inflation, urban blight, pollution and other problems."

And who is the all-wise, all-good force able to solve these problems? Big Brother in the federal government.

According to the NEA book, "private decision-making based on maximizing profits has created problems ... the private enterpriste system is in need of change ... the government offers the only real potential route for controling and guiding the corporate sector . . . so as to meet human needs. . ."

The NEA book urges the federal government to put everyone on the payroll who is out of a job: "... the private sector currently is incapable of providing jogs to all who want them. Thus, if people are to work, it is only the public sector which is capable of employing them."

The NEA book adopts the discredited Keynesian dogma of government spending: "While spending increases the government's debt for a short time, such investment in jobs and economic stimulation will mean more income (and less debt) for the government in the future."

This is simply not true. Our government has been engaging in Keynesian-style spending since the 1930s and the debt is still growing larger. When government puts more people on the payroll, the wages must come out of other taxpayers' pockets.

The NEA book promotes having the federal government (instead of the states) charter corporations, requiring consumer advocates on corporation boards and breaking up the oil companies and other large corporations. The NEA book urges bigger federal spending, national health insurance and an extension of federal control over education.

All these grandiose plans would be financed by increasing the rates of federal income taxes, especially on "the privileged few who ... can afford 'private' schools for their children and pay expensive country club dues to play golf." (Emphasis in the original book.)

It is too bad our children are taught that big government has the solution to our economic problems, because it usually does a worse job at higher cost than private enterprise.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Perils of Population Growth

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The final Armageddon will likely come, in the opinion of intelligence analysts, not from a nuclear holocaust but from the simple crush of people.

No less than the National Security Council has labeled the runaway population growth around the world as a "threat to our national security."

The council called for population reports last year from U.S. embassies in 77 countries. Their responses have now been summarized in a grim intelligence document.

The study warns that the sheer mass of people already is beginning to stifle human life on this planet. Our ambassadors report that underdeveloped nations are running out of food to sustain their people. Living costs are plunging these nations into debt until they are unable to finance their own survival.

The human encroachment, like a plague of locusts, is also devastating the land. "A majority of our embassies in Africa, Asia and some in Latin America, report large pockets of declining agriculture productivity due to widespread slash-and-burn farming, overgrazing and overcropping," the study asserts. The cause: "population pressures."

The same warning is echoed in an Agriculture Dept. report which declares urgently that, unless the population explosion is contained, "there ultimately is no solution to the world food problem."

The population bomb, warns the intelligence study, will also produce a political explosion. In many countries, the U.S. embassies predict "rising unemployment and underemployment, with countless millions unable to eke out a living in rural areas, jamming into already overcrowded cities where living conditions for many are appalling."

This "can only spawn social unrest with serious political and even potential strategic implications," the study stresses. By the year 2000, for example, Mexico City may be the most populous urban area in the world.

One expert fears there may be 60 million Mexicans fleeing across U.S. borders within the next generation to escape the overcrowding in Mexico.

Yet there is "a widespread unawareness of the economic facts of life," states the report, "including wishful thinking that economic development will automatically resolve the population problem." A disturbing 62 per cent of the nations have no population policy at all.

The U.S. population policy, for that matter, consists of shipping contraceptives abroad and supporting family planning programs. These efforts, contends the report, "will not help reduce population growth rates enough to avert a major disaster."

Nor is migration "the safety valve it once was for relieving population pressures," adds the study. It will take "the commitment of millions of dedicated people if mankind is to be spared disaster."

Footnote: Rep. Frederick Richmond, D.-N.Y., is leading a move in Congress to deal with the population problem.

Texas Tale: The people who run nursing homes in Texas have made friends and influenced the right people from Austin to Washington.

They appear to have a friend, for instance, in their governor. Dolph Briscoe, a wealthy rancher now in the statehouse, has received $13,000 in campaign money from the Texas Nursing Home Association's political action fund.

This may explain his indifference to nursing home abuses, which appear to be worse in Texas than in any other state. He has put together a licensing board which rarely acts against homes caught in violations.

"We don't lift many licenses," one board member admitted to our associate, Howie Kurtz, whom we sent to Texas to investigate the nursing home scandal. "We've had some people come before us that should have had their licenses yanked."

A spokesman for Briscoe denied that the governor is influenced by his contributions. "He gets donations from a lot of people," the spokesman told Kurtz.

The nursing homes have also helped to send several Texans to Congress. Reps. Omar Burleson, J.J. Pickle and Olin Teague, all Democrats, have received generous contributions from the industry. But Sen. John Tower, a rootin' tootin' Republican, has also been blessed with nursing home money.

The industry invested $10,000 in the abortive presidential campaign of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D.-Tex.

But far more scandalous is the love affair between the nursing homes and the Texas legislature. Take Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, for example. He personally killed a bill to require more training for nursing home aides. A few months later, Von Dohlen opened his own nursing home in Aransas Pass, Tex. He conceded to Kurtz that the bill would have made nursing homes more expensive to operate.

This year, Von Dohlen has pushed through a law forbidding the state from canceling a nursing home's contract without a hearing. He insisted that he supports good patient care but wants to ensure due process for owners.

Two other state legislators, Rep. Arthur Temple and Sen. Bill Moore, have sold their nursing homes to National Living Centers, one of the largest chains in the country.

"It's strictly a real estate deal. My involvement is so indirect I don't consider it a conflict," Temple told Kurtz. Moore, who still owns another home, said: "I have other business interests. I'm not going to disenfranchise myself just because I own a nursing home."

J., conducted a poll of high school graduates, it discovered that 61 per cent do not believe in the profit system, 83 per cent estimate profits to be 50 per cent or more, and 55 per cent believe that the government should own all banks, railroads and steel companies.

When the Roper Public Opinion Research Center conducted a poll of college students, it discovered that 87 per cent believe business is too concerned with profits and not enough with public responsibility, 62 per cent believe that government should place stricter controls on business, 54 per cent favor government breaking up the big corporations into samller companies and 56 per cent believe that more government intervention is necessary to protect individuals from so-called "economic abuses" by business.

Students are not born with these ideas and they have not learned them from practical experience. These fallacies are what they have been taught in the schools, deliberately, systematically and pervasively.

If you want to have a firsthand look at how this is done, get a copy of the book called "A Working Economy For Americans," sponsored by the National Education Association and a consortium of environmentalists and others who believe that the federal government can provide the solution to all economic problems.

In this book promoted by the NEA, the profit motive is the bogeyman which has brought about "inequalities of wealth and income, inflation, urban blight, pollution and other problems."

And who is the all-wise, all-good force able to solve these problems? Big Brother in the federal government.

According to the NEA book, "private decision-making based on maximizing profits has created problems ... the private enterpriste system is in need of change ... the government offers the only real potential route for controling and guiding the corporate sector . . . so as to meet human needs. . ."

The NEA book urges the federal government to put everyone on the payroll who is out of a job: "... the private sector currently is incapable of providing jogs to all who want them. Thus, if people are to work, it is only the public sector which is capable of employing them."

The NEA book adopts the discredited Keynesian dogma of government spending: "While spending increases the government's debt for a short time, such investment in jobs and economic stimulation will mean more income (and less debt) for the government in the future."

This is simply not true. Our government has been engaging in Keynesian-style spending since the 1930s and the debt is still growing larger. When government puts more people on the payroll, the wages must come out of other taxpayers' pockets.

The NEA book promotes having the federal government (instead of the states) charter corporations, requiring consumer advocates on corporation boards and breaking up the oil companies and other large corporations. The NEA book urges bigger federal spending, national health insurance and an extension of federal control over education.

All these grandiose plans would be financed by increasing the rates of federal income taxes, especially on "the privileged few who ... can afford 'private' schools for their children and pay expensive country club dues to play golf." (Emphasis in the original book.)

It is too bad our children are taught that big government has the solution to our economic problems, because it usually does a worse job at higher cost than private enterprise.

Access To Legal Aid In Prisons

The U.S. Supreme Court's ruling that law libraries and legal help must be available to prisoners seeking freedom assured their continued access to the courts.

Observers have seen in those decisions a tendency by the high court to restrict access to the narrowest possible grounds. So, it is important that a majority of the court argued in this instance for a broadening of access. Justice Thurgood Marshall, who wrote the opinion for the six-member majority, emphasized that there is also a series of precedents for expanding prisoners' rights. And what the court has done is simply to set minimum standards for legal resources which should be available to the prisoners. The ruling requires that each prison system should have a law library for inmates to use, or provide assistance in the person of a lawyer or legal air.

Such requirements are not excessive, and even more importantly prison walls should not bar a person's access to the American system of justice.

Hearts Are Trumps

Driving through the Great Plains states, on our vacation, we stopped at a roadside cafe. As we rested, my wife and I shared our disappointment with the scenery. We'd found nothing to look at along the route. A truck driver sitting at the next table apparently overheard, but said nothing.

He left before us, but on a long, twisting slope, we soon caught up with him. We had no room to pass and so settled in line behind him. After a few minutes, we noticed his right turn signal was blinking . . . but there was no turn-off in sight. Puzzled, we looked around. My wife then noticed some antelope off to the right. Moments later, the truck's right turn signal blinked again. And we saw a massive and colorful rock formation. Some miles farther, the left signal alerted us to a golden eagle perched in a tree.

We stayed behind that trucker for several miles more, not even passing when we had the chance. He showed us more of nature's wonders than we could have imagined.

Noah's Flood

We were fishing our way around the U.S., towing a trailer and carrying a car-top boat. On the Gulf Coast of Florida it had been raining for several weeks. Late one Saturday night we pulled into a trailer park at Seminole. My husband disconnected the trailer so that I might attend an early Mass the next day.

Sunday morning in the rain I drove to a near-by church and parked as close to the sheltered entrance as possible. "Good morning, Father," I said, as I sloshed toward the porch. "I'm a visitor from California."

He smiled. "Good morning to you." Then pointing to the boat on top of my car, he asked, "Do you know something I don't?"

Another Answer For Juveniles?

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration reports that the cost of operating juvenile correctional institutions went up sharply from 1971 to 1974, though the number in such facilities dropped. The size of the discrepancy is puzzling, even when one fully takes into account the fact that the cost of almost everything was on the rise during the period.

In 1971, according to figures compiled for the LEAA by the Census Bureau, there were 54,729 juveniles in facilities for deliquents. Three years later the number had gone to 44,922. News accounts we have seen do not cite any. LEAA speculation as to the probable reasons for this large decline. Nor is anything reported as to why, with so many fewer held in detention centers and other facilities, the costs rose so dramatically, from $409,000,000 in 1971 to $483,000,000 in 1974. This figures out to $6989 apiece in 1970, and that rose to a whopping $10,339 by 1974.

Reasons for this aside, there is one thing about which there can be no doubt: Society pays heavily for the conditions that give rise to juvenile delinquency. Some benefits accrue to society, but a large proportion of that outlay goes for little more than warehousing of youngsters who have gotten into trouble with the law. It all adds up to a strong argument for devoting more resources to identifying and dealing with the causes of deliquency, which in the end might require spending far less on correctional institutions.

Another point can be made. There must surely be better ways of handling delinquents than institutionalizing them, and it appears likely that almost any alternative would be less expensive.

Nice Job!

The new hanging baskets are up around the Clinton square, having been re-furbished by volunteer work with the cost borne by various organizations in town.

They're a refreshing sight, even in this month when we have fresh flowers in our yards.

We wish we had a nice bubbly fountain or two around the square now and some more benches where folks could sit to rest a bit-and, maybe, before too long, we can have some trees planted along the sidewalk? Why not. Clinton has such a built-in asset in its nice, big square and every little thing to make it more attractive brings more shoppers into the community.

Thanks to everyone who helped with the basket project. It's a nice job, well-done.

'GIVE' EM HELL, MCNARY' VETOES TRIBUTES TO TRUMAN

By ROBERT E. LUCKEN
Globe-Democrat Staff Writer

In his best "give'em hell, McNary" tradition, St. Louis County Supervisor Gene McNary has vetoes two bills relating to the late President Harry S. Truman.

The bills, adopted by the Democratic controlled County Council, would have named the Government Center Plaza "Harry S. Truman Memorial Plaza" and would have given the county's 4,000 employes a holiday on Truman's May 8 birthday.

Republican McNary, in his message to the council, said he suspects Truman "would have vigorously taken a legislative body to task" for the way the holiday bill was enacted.

He said the council did not bother to consult the Civil Srevice Commission, authorized to handle such matters, nor did it consider the 10 holidays already given to employes. One holiday, McNary noted, is a personal one and can be taken any day the employe chooses.

Further, McNary noted the government center was built during the administration of a Republican supervisor and a Republican-controlled council.

"Both determined it was in the best interests of our citizens not to resort to politics by naming the new government cent after famous Republicans," he said.

"To embark upon such a course at this time would lead to changing names with each political change in administration.

"While we all admire and respect the memory of a great Missourian, President Harry S. Truman, the St. Louis County Government Center, including its plaza, is the seat of county government and was designed for and must be preserved for the use of all its citizens," McNary said.

The Council, with a 4-3 Democratic majority, apparently lacks the fifth vote needed to override the veto.

The two new vetos bring to four the number McNary has issued on Democratic legislation-since the new majority took over Jan. 1.

Before disclosing his vetos, McNary had said Truman was one of his favorite presidents.

"I intend to do what he would have done."

FAMILY MATTERS

It had been ten years since the last reunion of my husband's family. The years had done their work. Infants had grown into children. Children had become teenagers. And those I remembered as teenagers were now bringing infants of their own. "Each family should introduce itself," I said to my husband, "so we know who everyone is."

He nodded in agreement and slipped off to talk to his cousins. Soon he returned. "It's all set," he told me. "right after dinner."

As we finished our desert, a man stood up and tapped his spoon against his glass for quiet. "It has been suggested," he bagan, "that we all introduce ourselves and I've been asked to start." He paused and look around. "Well, you all know who I am, and here at the table, with me is my family." And he sat down.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

The Final Conflict:

Business leaders unify politically, nationally for all-out showdown with Meany-Carter

WASHINGTON — In olden days -- about 1972 -- ponderous global and domestic matters would be decided when labor chief George Meany got out on the Burning Tree Country Club golf links with powerful cabinet members and even the President of the U.S. But Jimmy Carter doesn't play golf. And a recent check of Burning Tree doesn't disclose any Jody Powells or Hamilton Jordans among the new applicants.

So when Brothers Carter and Meany decided time had come to revamp the national labor law (NLRA) an aide of each president met over the tepid July 16 weekend in the White House. Laboriously, point by point, they worked out Jimmy Carter's "labor law reform" proposals to Congress--something no recent President has delivered.

There's a new cast of leading characters slowly emerging in this steaming town. So they're certainly worth putting on the record. Representing Jimmy Carter that July 16 weekend was a David Rubenstein, deputy to Stu Eizenstat, the President's assistant for domestic affairs and policy. And for Meany, there was labor's special counsel, Larry Gold.

Whenever Rubenstein and Gold stonewalled or sought clarification, Rubenstein would call Eizenstat at home. And Gold would check in with the increasingly influential 49-year-old Thomas Donahue, executive assistant to Meany. Take note of "young" Donahue, as they call him. Many say he'll be the AFL-CIO's second-in-command when Lane Kirkland succeeds Meany.

Then last Monday Jimmy Carter sent Congress his proposals for special alterations of the National Labor Relations Act which positively will help unions push into the South in one of their most sweeping organizing drives since the bloody '30s.

Swiftly American industry mobilized for the counterattack. Not even during the Lyndon Johnson or Jack Kennedy administrations had they faced such a united front of the White House and the House of Labor.

It was, and is, and will be for another year, political battalion against political battalion. Businessmen who had come to praise Mr. Carter now are organizing to bury him politically. And with him, inter the Democratic majority in the Congress.

Thus the political issue transcends even the labor law fight on which it pivots.

This will be industry's broadest-based counterattack in history.

"We will organize the broadest coalition ever put together by management in the history of battle on Capitol Hill," predicts Richard Creighton, assistant executive director of the Associated General Contractors. He and his AGC colleagues directed the businessmen's National Action Committee's recent famed successful battle against congressional passage of the extended picketing common situs bill, which labor lost.

But does industry, which is geared to production-management and lobbying, have the potential political expertise for a final conflict with such experienced, veteran infighters as Jimmy Carter and George Meany, not to mention the auto workers' president Doug Fraser?

Well, my inquiries reveal they are beefing up their battalions. According to the Federal Election Commission there now are some 500 corporate political action committees(PAC). And such giants as AT&T have signaled their operating companies that the time has come to get rolling. And soon Ma Bell itself will have its own national PAC. This comes some 32 years after the men's clothing union's late leader, Sidney Hillman, launched the first at Franklin Roosevelt's "suggestion." But industry is catching up.

Further, the battalions are turning into legions. There are some 375 trade association PACs. In this broad front of which Creighton talks will be the Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, the Associated General Contractors' 8,300 affiliated firms and 20,000 associate and affiliate members in 114 chapters.

And, for example, such trade outfits as the National Federation of Independent Business Inc., which alone has over 500,000 member firms. If they can market politics as they do air-conditioners, blenders, TV sets and autos, they'll have it made because their juices are up.

On July 27 some 400 leaders of commerce and industry will meet in the Capitol Hilton for the new coalition's first major anti-Carter-Meany strategy session.

Business targets come to far more than stopping the Carter-Meany "labor law reform" campaign and more than halting a Southern unionizing drive. First the management movement now wants to drub labor in its own ball park. It will be an all-star game.

And the men of management have two bills of their own which they hope to push through the Congress: the Employee Freedom of Representation Act of 1977, introduced by a former member of the AFL-CIO building and construction trades, Sen. Orrin Hatch (Utah) and Texas's John Tower. Says the 43-year-old Hatch: the intent of the bill is "to give individual employes the freedom of choice to join or refrain from joining labor unions or from financially supporting them, unless they desire to do so." And a similar bill now is in the House, introduced by Illinois's John Erlenborn and John Ashbrook of Ohio.

Thus industry is going eyeball to eyeball with labor and Carter. They'll be nose to nose right into the spring of the 1978 election year. I do believe it's make or break politically and perhaps industrially for both sides. One will bury the other, first in the Congress and then during the congressional campaign. Just watch.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Perils of Population Growth

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The final Armageddon will likely come, in the opinion of intelligence analysts, not from a nuclear holocaust but from the simple crush of people.

No less than the National Security Council has labeled the runaway population growth around the world as a "threat to our national security."

The council called for population reports last year from U.S. embassies in 77 countries. Their responses have now been summarized in a grim intelligence document.

The study warns that the sheer mass of people already is beginning to stifle human life on this planet. Our ambassadors report that underdeveloped nations are running out of food to sustain their people. Living costs are plunging these nations into debt until they are unable to finance their own survival.

The human encroachment, like a plague of locusts, is also devastating the land. "A majority of our embassies in Africa, Asia and some in Latin America, report large pockets of declining agriculture productivity due to widespread slash-and-burn farming, overgrazing and overcropping," the study asserts. The cause: "population pressures."

The same warning is echoed in an Agriculture Dept. report which declares urgently that, unless the population explosion is contained, "there ultimately is no solution to the world food problem."

The population bomb, warns the intelligence study, will also produce a political explosion. In many countries, the U.S. embassies predict "rising unemployment and underemployment, with countless millions unable to eke out a living in rural areas, jamming into already overcrowded cities where living conditions for many are appalling."

This "can only spawn social unrest with serious political and even potential strategic implications," the study stresses. By the year 2000, for example, Mexico City may be the most populous urban area in the world.

One expert fears there may be 60 million Mexicans fleeing across U.S. borders within the next generation to escape the overcrowding in Mexico.

Yet there is "a widespread unawareness of the economic facts of life," states the report, "including wishful thinking that economic development will automatically resolve the population problem." A disturbing 62 per cent of the nations have no population policy at all.

The U.S. population policy, for that matter, consists of shipping contraceptives abroad and supporting family planning programs. These efforts, contends the report, "will not help reduce population growth rates enough to avert a major disaster."

Nor is migration "the safety valve it once was for relieving population pressures," adds the study. It will take "the commitment of millions of dedicated people if mankind is to be spared disaster."

Footnote: Rep. Frederick Richmond, D.-N.Y., is leading a move in Congress to deal with the population problem.

Texas Tale: The people who run nursing homes in Texas have made friends and influenced the right people from Austin to Washington.

They appear to have a friend, for instance, in their governor. Dolph Briscoe, a wealthy rancher now in the statehouse, has received $13,000 in campaign money from the Texas Nursing Home Association's political action fund.

This may explain his indifference to nursing home abuses, which appear to be worse in Texas than in any other state. He has put together a licensing board which rarely acts against homes caught in violations.

"We don't lift many licenses," one board member admitted to our associate, Howie Kurtz, whom we sent to Texas to investigate the nursing home scandal. "We've had some people come before us that should have had their licenses yanked."

A spokesman for Briscoe denied that the governor is influenced by his contributions. "He gets donations from a lot of people," the spokesman told Kurtz.

The nursing homes have also helped to send several Texans to Congress. Reps. Omar Burleson, J.J. Pickle and Olin Teague, all Democrats, have received generous contributions from the industry. But Sen. John Tower, a rootin' tootin' Republican, has also been blessed with nursing home money.

The industry invested $10,000 in the abortive presidential campaign of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D.-Tex.

But far more scandalous is the love affair between the nursing homes and the Texas legislature. Take Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, for example. He personally killed a bill to require more training for nursing home aides. A few months later, Von Dohlen opened his own nursing home in Aransas Pass, Tex. He conceded to Kurtz that the bill would have made nursing homes more expensive to operate.

This year, Von Dohlen has pushed through a law forbidding the state from canceling a nursing home's contract without a hearing. He insisted that he supports good patient care but wants to ensure due process for owners.

Two other state legislators, Rep. Arthur Temple and Sen. Bill Moore, have sold their nursing homes to National Living Centers, one of the largest chains in the country.

"It's strictly a real estate deal. My involvement is so indirect I don't consider it a conflict," Temple told Kurtz. Moore, who still owns another home, said: "I have other business interests. I'm not going to disenfranchise myself just because I own a nursing home."

Todays News In Brief

Solo launch next for shuttle

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Enterprise has made its highest and last piggyback test flight before a solo launch Aug. 12.

Some "nuisance problems" were reported during the craft's hour-long flight Tuesday atop a Boeing 747, but National Aviation and Space Administration officials said everything was generally satisfactory.

"Absolutely nothing" developed during the final test to prevent the Enterprise from making it first free flight next month, said test flight manager Donald "Deke" Slayton, a former astronaut.

Traveling 312 m.p.h., the 75-ton shuttle was lofted to an altitude of 28,660 feet, the highest so far, before 747 pilot Fitzhugh Fulton nosed the transport jet into a seven-degree dive for 4,-000 feet.

It's at that point on Aug. 12 that seven explosive bolts holding the shuttle to the 747 will be fired, releasing the Enterprise for a five-minute free-flight glide. It will land on a 15,000-foot dry lake runway.

Fever may have caused death

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rocky Mountain spotted fever is beleived to have killed a Southern Illinois teen-ager, a spokesman for St. Louis Children's Hospital said.

Scott Lewis, 16, of Herrin, Ill., died Sunday, shortly after he was admitted with symptoms of the disease, the spokeman said.

Karol Brooks, 8, of Fredericktown, also was hospitalized Saturday with similar symptoms. She was in fair condition Tuesday.

An autopsy has been performed on Lewis to determine if he died of spotted fever. The results are expected early next week.

Illinois health officials have said three cases of the disease have been confirmed and several more suspected in Southern Illinois this summer.

Herrin is in Williamson County about 200 miles southeast of St. Louis. Fredericktown is about 100 miles south of St. Louis.

Strikers try to halt traffic

UNIVERSITY CITY, Mo. (AP) — St. Louis County's union firemen threw up picket lines at major entrances to University City today in an attempt to halt traffic of other unions into the city, including neighboring firefighters answering alarms.

Striking University City firemen, who have ignored a court injunction ordering them back to work, were ordered to appear in court Thursday to show cause why they should not be held in contempt.

County Supervisor Gene McNary said union bus drivers were refusing to drive into the St. Louis suburb and that supervisory personnel were driving the routes.

Richard Walker, president of Local 398 of the International Association of Firefighters, said union firemen in St. Louis had notified the fire chief they would not answer calls to University City and that he had received assurances from the St. Louis Labor Council that their members would honor the picket lines.

"That means if you're a labor man you won't come into University City to deliver any product," Walker said.

Brush fire out of control

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A brush fire, fueled by bone-dry chaparral and fanned by gusty winds, roared down from the Santa Ynez Mountains today, destroying expensive Spanish-style homes and threatening the downtown of this picturesque coastal community.

Hundreds of persons fled their homes as firemen fought the blaze which raged out of control in the northeast section of the city, less than one mile from the city's courthouse and about two miles from the Pacific Ocean. At least 150 homes were destroyed.

Seventeen persons were reported injured, most of them suffering from smoke inhalation or minor burns from wind-carried firebrands. No deaths were reported.

Shortly before dawn, the winds shifted and blew from the sea into the fire, then died down altogether.

At first light, five bombers and two helicopters began dropping chemical fire retardants on the fire.

Movie plot sparks kidnaping

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The kidnaping of 26 children and their bus driver came from an idea for a movie plot, according to reports published after the three young men accused of the bizarre crime pleaded guilty. The new information about the case came forward Tuesday following guilty pleas in Alameda County Superior Court by James Schoenfeld, 25, his brother, Richard, 24, and Frederick Woods, 25.

Cambodia death toll mulled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Highranking Carter administration officials are depicting communist-ruled Cambodia as a country where "tens if not hundreds of thousands" have died. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke told a House panel Tuesday that some "journalists and scholars guess that between half a million and 1.2 million have died since 1975."

Carter salutes Andreotti

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says Italy is recoverinv from serious social and economic problems under the leadership of Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti. In a toast to Andreotti following a White House state dinner Tuesday night, Carter saluted the Italian leader as a man whose record is "impressive indeed."

Anti-black attitude cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Programs for America's minorities are being jeopardized by an anti-black attitude in the Carter administration and in Congress, the leader of the Congressional Black Caucus is charging. Rep. Parren J. Mitchell, D+Md., told the National Urban League convention on Tuesday he believes President Carter may be reacting too harshly to criticism of his policies by blacks.

Settlement status examined

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli cabinet met today to decide whether to grant full legal status to three Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River. A cabinet committee approved the move Tuesday. The U.S. State Department said it was "deeply disappointed" by the action and it called settlements in occupied Arab territories "an obstacle in the peacemaking process."

Ten tips on how to win

1. Constantly scout our contests. Women's magazines, newspapers, grocery shelves (on boxes and cartons) and contest newsletters are good sources.

2. Enter on time. Note the contest deadline and the required postmark date. Missing this gets you disqualified right off the bat.

3. Follow the rules exactly. If the directions say send entries on a three-by-five card, don't vary the size. Use only original entry blanks, never copies. They're almost always banned. Don't type if it says print.

4. When writing slogans or jingles, say what the sponsors want to hear. Study the product you're writing about. Buy it, if possible. Use it. Analyze its advertisements. Study its label. Then emphasize its selling points in your entry.

5. If possible, study past contest winning jingles and slogans. Some sponsors want sincerity; others cleverness.

6. Keep the writing simple. Always use correct English.

7. Puns, analogies and word plays often help catch judges' attention.

8. Enter often. Some people send 200-300 entries to one contest. Mrs. Garner recommends about 15.

9. Don't send all your entries to one contest at once. Space out the mailings several days or weeks apart. For sweepstakes in particular, most judges take a handful of entries from each mailbag. At deadline time, winners are usually selected in a random drawing from entries that arrived in many different mailbags.

10. Be persistent. After entering one contest, don't sit back and wait to see if you win. Keep "feeding the fire."

Todays News In Brief

Solo launch next for shuttle

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Enterprise has made its highest and last piggyback test flight before a solo launch Aug. 12.

Some "nuisance problems" were reported during the craft's hour-long flight Tuesday atop a Boeing 747, but National Aviation and Space Administration officials said everything was generally satisfactory.

"Absolutely nothing" developed during the final test to prevent the Enterprise from making it first free flight next month, said test flight manager Donald "Deke" Slayton, a former astronaut.

Traveling 312 m.p.h., the 75-ton shuttle was lofted to an altitude of 28,660 feet, the highest so far, before 747 pilot Fitzhugh Fulton nosed the transport jet into a seven-degree dive for 4,-000 feet.

It's at that point on Aug. 12 that seven explosive bolts holding the shuttle to the 747 will be fired, releasing the Enterprise for a five-minute free-flight glide. It will land on a 15,000-foot dry lake runway.

Fever may have caused death

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rocky Mountain spotted fever is beleived to have killed a Southern Illinois teen-ager, a spokesman for St. Louis Children's Hospital said.

Scott Lewis, 16, of Herrin, Ill., died Sunday, shortly after he was admitted with symptoms of the disease, the spokeman said.

Karol Brooks, 8, of Fredericktown, also was hospitalized Saturday with similar symptoms. She was in fair condition Tuesday.

An autopsy has been performed on Lewis to determine if he died of spotted fever. The results are expected early next week.

Illinois health officials have said three cases of the disease have been confirmed and several more suspected in Southern Illinois this summer.

Herrin is in Williamson County about 200 miles southeast of St. Louis. Fredericktown is about 100 miles south of St. Louis.

Strikers try to halt traffic

UNIVERSITY CITY, Mo. (AP) — St. Louis County's union firemen threw up picket lines at major entrances to University City today in an attempt to halt traffic of other unions into the city, including neighboring firefighters answering alarms.

Striking University City firemen, who have ignored a court injunction ordering them back to work, were ordered to appear in court Thursday to show cause why they should not be held in contempt.

County Supervisor Gene McNary said union bus drivers were refusing to drive into the St. Louis suburb and that supervisory personnel were driving the routes.

Richard Walker, president of Local 398 of the International Association of Firefighters, said union firemen in St. Louis had notified the fire chief they would not answer calls to University City and that he had received assurances from the St. Louis Labor Council that their members would honor the picket lines.

"That means if you're a labor man you won't come into University City to deliver any product," Walker said.

Brush fire out of control

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A brush fire, fueled by bone-dry chaparral and fanned by gusty winds, roared down from the Santa Ynez Mountains today, destroying expensive Spanish-style homes and threatening the downtown of this picturesque coastal community.

Hundreds of persons fled their homes as firemen fought the blaze which raged out of control in the northeast section of the city, less than one mile from the city's courthouse and about two miles from the Pacific Ocean. At least 150 homes were destroyed.

Seventeen persons were reported injured, most of them suffering from smoke inhalation or minor burns from wind-carried firebrands. No deaths were reported.

Shortly before dawn, the winds shifted and blew from the sea into the fire, then died down altogether.

At first light, five bombers and two helicopters began dropping chemical fire retardants on the fire.

Movie plot sparks kidnaping

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The kidnaping of 26 children and their bus driver came from an idea for a movie plot, according to reports published after the three young men accused of the bizarre crime pleaded guilty. The new information about the case came forward Tuesday following guilty pleas in Alameda County Superior Court by James Schoenfeld, 25, his brother, Richard, 24, and Frederick Woods, 25.

Cambodia death toll mulled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Highranking Carter administration officials are depicting communist-ruled Cambodia as a country where "tens if not hundreds of thousands" have died. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke told a House panel Tuesday that some "journalists and scholars guess that between half a million and 1.2 million have died since 1975."

Carter salutes Andreotti

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says Italy is recoverinv from serious social and economic problems under the leadership of Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti. In a toast to Andreotti following a White House state dinner Tuesday night, Carter saluted the Italian leader as a man whose record is "impressive indeed."

Anti-black attitude cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Programs for America's minorities are being jeopardized by an anti-black attitude in the Carter administration and in Congress, the leader of the Congressional Black Caucus is charging. Rep. Parren J. Mitchell, D+Md., told the National Urban League convention on Tuesday he believes President Carter may be reacting too harshly to criticism of his policies by blacks.

Settlement status examined

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli cabinet met today to decide whether to grant full legal status to three Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River. A cabinet committee approved the move Tuesday. The U.S. State Department said it was "deeply disappointed" by the action and it called settlements in occupied Arab territories "an obstacle in the peacemaking process."

Ten tips on how to win

1. Constantly scout our contests. Women's magazines, newspapers, grocery shelves (on boxes and cartons) and contest newsletters are good sources.
2. Enter on time. Note the contest deadline and the required postmark date. Missing this gets you disqualified right off the bat.
3. Follow the rules exactly. If the directions say send entries on a three-by-five card, don't vary the size. Use only original entry blanks, never copies. They're almost always banned. Don't type if it says print.
4. When writing slogans or jingles, say what the sponsors want to hear. Study the product you're writing about. Buy it, if possible. Use it. Analyze its advertisements. Study its label. Then emphasize its selling points in your entry.
5. If possible, study past contest winning jingles and slogans. Some sponsors want sincerity; others cleverness.
6. Keep the writing simple. Always use correct English.
7. Puns, analogies and word plays often help catch judges' attention.
8. Enter often. Some people send 200-300 entries to one contest. Mrs. Garner recommends about 15.
9. Don't send all your entries to one contest at once. Space out the mailings several days or weeks apart. For sweepstakes in particular, most judges take a handful of entries from each mailbag. At deadline time, winners are usually selected in a random drawing from entries that arrived in many different mailbags.
10. Be persistent. After entering one contest, don't sit back and wait to see if you win. Keep "feeding the fire."

Distribution method for White House tours altered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is receiving so many complaints from members of Congress about the difficulty of getting constituents on "VIP tours" of the White House that a new method of distributing tour tickets is being adopted.

Rejected, at least for the present, is a suggestion from the office of Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., that the early morning tours — not to be confused with regular public tours — be abolished.

Instead, tour office director Nancy Willing met Monday with Frank Moore, President Carter's assistant for congressional liaison, and decided to try a new system of ticket distribution that hopefully will make it easier for senators and House members to claim their weekly allotment of tickets.

Roy Greenaway, Cranston's administrative assistant, said the old system was inequitable and required time-wasting letter writing and phone calling between Capitol Hill and the White House.

Instead of soliciting individual ticket requests, Moore and Miss Willing said, each congressional office now will fill out request forms once a day, which will be picked up daily by White House messengers. On the following day the messenger will return with names of constituents being given tickets, along with a notation of the day and time they will be expected at the White House.

This should sharply reduce the flow of letters and phone calls, Moore said, and give Miss Willing's staff more time to deal with special requests over and above each Congress member's weekly allotment.

House members routinely get 10 tickets a week, senators 15 to 20. They are coveted because they convey an element of status. Moreover, ticket holders do not have to stand in long lines and, once inside the White House, receive better guide service than regular visitors. They also see the China Room, named for its display of dishes from many administrations, which is not included on regular tours.

Miss Willing said an average of 1,300 visitors a day take the VIP tours, Tuesday through Saturday. The tours were initiated during the presidency of Dwight D. Eisenhhower.

The Moore-Willing solution may not eliminate one problem of which Greenaway complained. He said there is such ticket demand from Californians that July tickets were parceled out in March.

Rep. Elwood Hillis, R-Ind., wrote Carter about his own ticket problems, saying his constituents "indicate there has been a vast curtailment in the number of visitors" admitted for both VIP and regular tours.

Miss Willing said there has been no cutback, and reported that on some days the number of visitors has exceeded the year-earlier figure.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale is known widely to enjoy more influence, and wield greater responsibility, than most men who have held the office. Indeed, perhaps more and greater than anyone else.

There are limits, however, to what Mondale can do. He cannot, for example, use Carter's private elevator unless the President is with him and invites him inside the tiny conveyance, which goes between the White House basement and Carter's living quarters, with a stop along the way outside the State Dining Room.

Reporters have found Mondale, on several occasions, hoofing it up and down a narrow marble stairway that parallels the course of the elevator, which was empty each time.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell seems to have an excellent track record for faithfully reflecting Carter's views. Challenging him on that score almost always proves unrewarding.

On a recent occasion, a reporter was skeptical when Powell said Carter had no comment to offer on a particular subject. Faced with a demand that he recheck to make sure, Powell subsequently issued the following written statement: "The President agrees he has no comment."

What's the law?

The case of the unwanted motto

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

While "To be or not to be?" may be the question, to "Live free or die" was not the anser -- as far as Calvin was concerned. The motto "Live free or die" was imprinted on his automobile license plate by the state, and Calvin absolutely disapproved of the sentiment expressed. Consequently, on three occasions he covered up the motto with the help of a strip of adhesive tape and on three occasions he was arrested, convicted and fined for violating a state law that made it a crime to obscure the numbers or letters on a license plate.

Suffering from a prosecution complex, Calvin finally decided to take the initiative. He went to court and demanded that the gendarmes be ordered to stop arresting him for covering up the motto.

"Nonsense," responded the state. "It's our motto and our license plate. We have every right to protect both."

"But it's my automobile that carries around that motto," was Calvin's answer, "and I refuse to be coerced by the state into advertising a slogan that I find morally, ethically, religiously and politically abhorrent."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order the state to stop prosecuting Calvin for obscuring the motto on its license plate?

This is how the judge ruled: YES. The judge held that under the first amendment a person is entitled to maintain views that are different from those of the majority and he may refuse to support an idea that he finds morally objectionable. In this case, the state offers Calvin the choice to either use his private car as a "mobile billboard" for its ideological message -- "Live free or die" -- or to suffer the consequences. The state, concluded the judge, cannot constitutionally make him do so.

The second race was won by another McMullin Bros., "Miss Lottie." The third race attracted the most attention because of the reputation of the entrants: "Admiral Togo," "Little Patchen" and "Easter Bell." The horses fininshed in the order named.

What's the law?

The case of the unwanted motto

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

While "To be or not to be?" may be the question, to "Live free or die" was not the anser -- as far as Calvin was concerned. The motto "Live free or die" was imprinted on his automobile license plate by the state, and Calvin absolutely disapproved of the sentiment expressed. Consequently, on three occasions he covered up the motto with the help of a strip of adhesive tape and on three occasions he was arrested, convicted and fined for violating a state law that made it a crime to obscure the numbers or letters on a license plate.

Suffering from a prosecution complex, Calvin finally decided to take the initiative. He went to court and demanded that the gendarmes be ordered to stop arresting him for covering up the motto.

"Nonsense," responded the state. "It's our motto and our license plate. We have every right to protect both."

"But it's my automobile that carries around that motto," was Calvin's answer, "and I refuse to be coerced by the state into advertising a slogan that I find morally, ethically, religiously and politically abhorrent."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order the state to stop prosecuting Calvin for obscuring the motto on its license plate?

This is how the judge ruled: YES. The judge held that under the first amendment a person is entitled to maintain views that are different from those of the majority and he may refuse to support an idea that he finds morally objectionable. In this case, the state offers Calvin the choice to either use his private car as a "mobile billboard" for its ideological message -- "Live free or die" -- or to suffer the consequences. The state, concluded the judge, cannot constitutionally make him do so.

Dear Ann Landers

Mother is feed up on quizzes to show if she's a 'good parent'

Dear Ann Landers: I am a mother of three children and have had it up to here with quizzes that are supposed to show whether I am a "god parent."

My answer is, "I am as good a parent as I can be," and I mean it. My husband and I love each other (Father Theodore Hesburgh's first rule). We do things as a family. We take an interest in our children's school projects and activities. We don't spoil them with gifts or privileges. They work for spending money. They aren't disciplined with a strap. We use the "talk-it-out" approach.

What then is my gripe? Simply this: As they get older they become more surly, more irresponsible and more disobedient. They argue among themselves, whine, sulk and complain. I used to enjoy doing things for them but now I find it neither satisfying nor rewarding.

I know we are not alone, Ann. Our friends tell us, "If you think they are a handful now, just wait a couple years."

Maybe if the kids would try a little harder, more parents would be able to answer "yes" to that survey you ran recently -- "If you had it to do over again would you have had children?"

Here's a quiz for THEM -- for a change:

1. When did you last hug your mom without wanting something?
2. When did you last make an attempt to be especially pleasant to your dad without asking him to fix something?
3. Do you say hello to your parents' friends and treat them with respect?
4. Do you take pride in your home or do you leave yogurt cups in the living room and the spills for someone else to clean up? How about the yard? Did you leave your new football out in the rain all night?
5. How about the car? Can a person sit down without getting stuck to a wad of gum? Speaking of the car, when was the last time Dad had to pull over to the curb or the shoulder of the road because of the yelling or fighting in the back seat?
6. When did you last tell your mom the dinner was good and that you appreciate the effort she puts into cooking for you?
7. Are you on time when Mom or Dad offers to drive you somewhere or pick you up? Are you where you are supposed to be or do they have to look for you?
8. When was the last time Mom or Dad had to bring a forgotten lunch or a book to school? Do you ever say thanks for this?
9. When did you last do what you were told without asking why or saying, "Wait a minute," or, "Do I have to?"
10. Are you proud of your mom or dad? Their manners? Could they be proud of you?

Please, kids, we love you. We could have a wonderful time together, but it's a two-way street. You have to do your part.- Florida Mom

Dear Mom: Millions of eyes will see your letter and the Kid Quiz. It's sure to make many parents feel less alone. (Your complaints are par for the course.) It may also connect with a few million kids out there who need to shape up. Thanks for the input.

Here are some canning tips for all the gardners.

Place fruits* that darken easily, such as pears and peaches, in a salt bath of two teaspoons of salt to one quart of water, then rinse in clean water just before packing.

Use soft water for blanching and precooking peas; it helps prevent cloudness.

To prevent shrinkage of fruit in jars, pack hot.

When canning catsup, pour off the water liquid on top of tomatoes after running through sieve. Your catsup will have a bright red appearance and cooking time will be cut in half.

For foods which have been blanched for freezing, add ice cubes to the water in which they are to be chilled to hasten the chilling and retain the full flavor.

To label jars of food, write on the jar while it is still hot with a bright colored crayon.

Grants awarded to TRCC

POPLAR BLUFF — The awarding of $135,507 in federal grants to continue three programs at Three Rivers Community College was announced at the July 20 meeting of the TRCC District Board of Trustees.

The college will receive $68,764 to continue the special services program. This program assists low income and physically handicapped students. The program offers guidance and seminars and maintains a career information and job placement center.

The board approved contract renewals to Maria Van Ella, secretary; and Patti Stewart, developmental English instructor and counselor, for special services. A director and paraprofessionals for this program will be hired later.

TRCC will receive $54,659 to continue the Ozark-Delta Talent Search Project. Talent search provides information about colleges and financial aid, gives assistance with admission applications and provides counseling for persons interested in postsecondary education. Contracts to Travis Young, director; Mickey Bradshaw, coordinator; and Arla Ward, secretary; were renewed. Also, a counselor's position has been established and will be filled later.

The Veterans' Cost of Instruction Program has been refunded in the amount of $12,084. However, depending on the number of veterans enrolled at TRCC this fall semester, the total amount of the grant may be adjusted. This program provides counseling and educational assistance to veterans. Dwight Thornton, coordinator, was offered a renewal contract.

In other personnel actions, the board accepted the resignation of Dale Privett, director of financial aids. Privett has accepted a position as a high school principal in Alton. The board approved the employment of David Belt, director of Special Services at TRCC, to replace Privett.

Also, Jane Rawlings was employed as a nursing instructor. She received a bachelor's degree from Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., and has professional nursing experience.

Cynthia Hartwell was employed as a music instructor. She is a TRCC graduate and received a bachelor's degree from Murray State University and a master's degree from the University of Illinois. She will replace Carol Coryell who has taken a one-year leave.

Glenda Joplin of Doniphan was employed as an academic counselor. She received a bachelor's degree from Oklahoma Baptist University and a master's degree from Arkansas State University. She has 13 years of experience in high school teaching and counseling.

Gerald Malmstrom, biology instructor, was appointed chairman of the Science, Mathematics and hysical Education Department. He was serving as acting chairman.

Lura Mills, learning resources specialist, was changed from a nine-months contract to a 12-months contract to provide library services during the summer.

Charles Whittom, TRCC business manager, was named federal compliance coordinator. He will monitor the college's compliance with federal regulations.

Upon recommendation by the dean of student services and vice president, the board voted to establish a $250 yearly scholarship for the person elected Student Senate president.

The board approved the selection of the firm of Kraft, Miles and Tatum to perform the annual independent audit of the college.

In his monthly report to the board, Dr. Jack L. Bottenfield, college president, said he will serve on the North Central Association of Schools and Colleges Review Committee. This committee meets twice a year and reviews recommendations of teams which examine colleges and schools for accreditation.

The Unplanned Picnic

You wake up some weekend morning . . . the sun is shining . . . the sky is blue. So why not pack up'n go — on a spur-of-the-moment picnic? No trouble at all if you have a supply of picnic essentials on hand . . . paper plates and napkins, plastic glasses, small salt and pepper shakers, a cutting board, a knife. It's smart to keep all these things at the ready in a picnic basket or tote bag. Then when the spirit moves you, just head to the nearest supermarket or the corner deli — pick up a loaf of bread, a wedge of cheese, a hunk of salami or other cold cuts, some tomatoes, some fruit or cookies . . . and off you go to your favorite picnic spot and assemble your meal on the spot.

The beverage to tote along is iced tea in flip top cans. Iced tea is the most refreshing, most thirst-quenching of all summer beverages. It's non-carbonated, and as it's already sweetened and flavored with lemon, there's no need to take along sugar and lemons. Put the handy six pack, chilled from the refrigerator, into an insulated bag or wrapped in newspapers to keep it cool — or pick up a bag of ice cubes en route.

Pension fund removal could streamline defense budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's an easy, almost painless way for President Carter to chop $9.7 billion out of the defense budget. He could shift the costs of retirement checks for current military pensioners out of the Pentagon budget.

But the cut would not decrease overall federal spending by one single penny. The annual tab would be moved into the government's income security account, which includes Social Security, welfare, food stamps, unemployment insurance, civil service retirement and pensions paid by the Veterans Administration.

This accounting change is one of the steps now under consideration in the Carter administration's effort to make sense of the tangled way the government accounts for federal workers' pensions.

Taken together, the changes under consideration at the Defense Department and the Office of Management and Budget would make the rapidly rising costs of pensions more obvious in the budget. And they would, for the first time, make the true future costs of pensions visible by putting them into the federal spending plan.

"Our grandchildren are going to have to shoulder a pretty heavy burden," said one official of the pension costs. "We have to start writing down what our debts are."

Carter promised during his campaign to cut billions from the defense budget, a pledge he has not thus far fulfilled. By shifting current pension costs, Carter could, after a fashion, fulfill his promise.

However, if all the changes were enacted, the Pentagon budget would increase. Estimates of the increase range from $500 million to $4.2 billion, depending on economic conditions.

Administration sources say an initial decision on most of the changes is expected within a month by Defense Secretary Harold Brown for the fiscal 1979 budget.

No worker's current or future pension would be increased or decreased by these changes.

"These are really accounting and bookkeeping arrangements that have little direct effect on spending," said one source.

Shifting current retirement costs out of the defense budget is the simplest of the possible changes.

Those who favor the change say paying retirement checks for former military personnel is not related to maintaining national security and should not be paid from the defense budget. Pension costs have eaten up a larger and larger chunk of the Pentagon budget, rising to 8.2 per cent in 1978 from only 1⅞ per cent in 1962.

Organizations of retired military personnel are against any change.

"Military retirement is unique. We consider it a relevant part of the career package," said Col. George Hennikus of the Retired Officers Association.

A Congressional Budget Office report said such groups "may oppose transferring the appropriation from defense to income security because the switch makes military retirement appear to some as a form of welfare to which a social stigma may seem to be attached."

Go Dutch And Feed Your Family $1-$2 $3!

Going Dutch sometimes means that everyone pays his own way. In this case it means going back to the simple, tasty food enjoyed by early Dutch settlers.

Prepared to make a good life in this new country, Dutch immigrants had the foresight to bring with them cows, pigs and various cooking necessities. They were able to purchase raisins and spices from the trading ships that called at New Amsterdam, but they brought their wonderful waffle irons with them from Holland. Though they lived simply off the produce of the land, they had all the embellishments to turn simple food into a feast.

This same approach can help you plan attractive and practical meals in this budget-conscious Bicentennial year. Start with a sensible food budget such as $1-$2-$3, and learn to feed a family of four (including two pre-teen children) with a $1 breakfast, $2 lunch and $3 dinner.

This incredibly good $3 dinner is based on an early Dutch menu that includes Creamed Ham and homemade Corn Waffles. Use your prettiest waffle irons so that your family feels delightfully spoiled, but do spare the food budget by using Carnation instant nonfat dry milk crystals in both the cream sauce and in the waffles. Instant milk supplies all the protein richness of regular milk at a fraction of the cost. Along with this historical main dish, serve tasty Quick Scalloped Tomatoes made the easy way with Contadina garden-fresh tomatoes right out of a can and a few seasoned bread crumbs. Raisin cookies are the perfect dessert.

Golden, tasty chicken noodle soup served with cheese and crackers, along with oranges and cookies for dessert will feed your family nutritiously and deliciously for $2.

The budget breakfast that can't be beat is Carnation Instant Breakfast mixed with 8 fluid ounces of milk. Use instant milk for a real saving without any loss of nutrition

Corn Waffles
(Makes 3 cups batter)

1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 tablespoon sugar
1/2 cup Carnation Instant Nonfat Dry Milk crystals
1 cup water
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1 egg
1 cup cream style corn

Mix flour, salt, baking powder, sugar and instant milk crystals in medium size bowl. Add water, oil and egg. Beat until smooth. Stir in corn. Cook in waffle iron until crisp.

Quick Scalloped Tomatoes
(Makes 2 cups)

1 cup (about 2 slices) fresh bread crumbs
1 2/3 cups (14 1/2-ounce can) Contadina Stewed Tomatoes
1 tablespoon dehydrated onion flakes
1/4 cup chopped celery

Sprinkle 1/2 cup crumbs over bottom of 1-quart dish. Pour tomatoes over crumbs. Sprinkle onions and celery over tomatoes. Top with remaining crumbs. Bake in hot oven (400°F.) 20 minutes.

13-year-olds win State; move to Regional

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

LEBANON— Sikeston's victory over Carthage in the 13-Year-Old State Babe Ruth Tournament wasn't a shutout, as had been their two previous victories. And the Sikeston team didn't play errorless baseball, as they had in their two outings before the Tuesday night game.

But the 13-year-old All-Stars will take it.

Sikeston trimmed a weary Carthage unit 7-3 to win the state tournament in undefeated fashion. Sikeston defeated Lebanon 3-1 last Saturday, then chalked up shutouts over Kirksville (10-0) and Carthage (7-0) Sunday and Monday before disposing of the Carthage club again Tuesday night to win it all.

The elated All-Stars can now look forward to a trip to Morehead, Minn. to play in the Midwest Plains Regional Tournament the first week in August. This is he first year that there has been competition past the state level in the 13-year-old divison.

"And we're gonna have to get out and raise some money," said Jim Green, one of the Sikeston coaches. Of course, he was referring to the financing of the Minnesota trip.

But none of the All-Stars will complain about it.

Carthage, which had been undefeated before Nick Garner shut them out Monday, had to rally in the last inning to eke out a 9-8 triumph over host Lebanon in the first game Monday night, earning the right to meet undefeated Sikeston in the contest that immediately followed. Carthage needed to win against Sikeston last night to force the double-elimination event into a fifth day of play Wednesday.

But Sikeston would have none of that.

Steve Green survived a rocky start in the first to master the Carthage squad on only five hits--three of them in the first. Once Green got in the groove, Carthage went down in order in four of the final six innings. They had only two hits and a walk after the first and never had more than one baserunner on at a time.

Sikeston staked Green to a 1-0 lead in the top of the first and might have gotten more, had it not been for some gutty pitching by Long of Carthage. Mike Hurley walked and stole second, then came around to score when Arner threw away Bert Perry's grounder to short. Perry went all the way to third on the overthrow and was there with nobody out, but Arner went to work. He got Green to fly out before throwing out Nick Garner himself. Al Merrell walked, but Phillip Carnell popped to second o end the inning.

Carthage did their only damage in the bottom ofthe first. Wright led off with a single and went to second on Shanks' tap back to the mound. McConnell singled him home and moved into scoring position when the relay was mishandled for only the second Sikeston error of the tournament. Gourley singled to put two on, and after a strikeout by Arner, Hurley booted Long's grounder to short for yet another miscue, allowing both runners to score.

But Sikeston atoned for the nightmarish first inning with four of their own in the third. Perry's leadoff hit and two straight errors on grounders to the left side resulted in a run. Al Merrell singled home another run, and a third scored on the wild throw in. Phillip Carnell grounded to shortand John Watkins popped to third, but pinch hitter Joey Kyle picked the team up with a double that chased home Merrell.

In the fifth, Nick Garner walked and went to third when a wild pickoff attempt went into the corner. Carnell lofted a sacrifice fly to make it 6-3.

Watkins singled home the last Sikeston run in the seventh after Carnell had reached on the seventh Carthage error of the day, stolen second and advanced to third on a wild pitch.

The win completed a tournament which saw Pat Collins' Sikeston unit completely dominate the play. The opposition scored in only two of 28 innings against the All-Stars, and the four errors in four games were a totral that most big league clubs would be proud of. And they averaged nearly seven runs a game againstthe best 13-year-old pitchers in the state.

Tuesday night's victory was far from bein the classiest victory in the tournament for the All-Stars, but one could forgive them for savoring it for awhile.

JBR Stars come up one win short

By Dale Forbis

The Sikeston Express, charging its way back from the losers' bracket of the Missouri State Babe Ruth Tournament, finally was derailed in the championship game. The 14 and 15-year-olds found themselves on tournament's last day with an unenviable task: They had to beat Jefferson City twice to grab the top honor. A 2-1 victory in the first game gave the Southeast Missourians hope, but Jefferson City dashed that hope in a 10-1 romp to the title.

Scott Campbell hurled the nail-biting victory in the first game, aided by brilliant defensive plays by centerfielder Brad Noel and shortstop Scott McDowell. Campbell allowed only six hits and a walk. The Jeff City run scored in the sixth in an infield boo-boo.

Both Sikeston runs scored in the third., McDowell, who was 2-for-2, led off with a single. Basehits by Sam Copeland and Noel filled the bases. Then, Campbell grounded the ball toward short and the Jefferson City shortstop threw home -- too late to get McDowell. A two-out walk to Joey Kyle forced in the winning run.

Loser Fitzgerald allowed only five hits and fanned 10 himself.

"We'd played two games last (Monday) night and then tried to go two more tonight," pointed out manager Charles Campbell. "And that first game was a tough one. It probably took something out of them."

Kevin Self took the mound for Sikeston and Jefferson City batted around in the bottom of the first. Self had hurled a two-hit shutout just 24 hours before and simply didn't have enough rest. Three hits, a pair of walks and four errors helped the eventual winners score four times and put the game away almost before it started. Four other Sikeston pitchers followed Self to the mound, none with much more success than the starter.

The Sikeston entry scored its lone run off of Clark, the winning pitcher, on Scott Campbell's two-out single in the fifth.

"We made too many errors to count," moaned Campbell, but his team had given it a good shot. After a first game loss, the trip to the championship game was as hard one.

Cape team wins Bank scramble

A pair of Cape Girardeau golfers--Bill Kurre and David McQuarry--won top honors of the weekend in the Bank of Sikeston Annual Two-Man Scramble Golf Tournament held at the Sikeston Country Club.

Kurre and McQuarry teamed for a 65 Saturday, then turned in an even finer 63 in the Sunday round for a 36-hole total of 128. They beat another out-of-town duo--Harrison and Bayless of Memphis-- by two strokes.

Charles McPhail and John Askey of Sikeston were the winners in Class A, shooting a 135 to nip Rob Mitchell and Clayton Vandivort, also of Sikeston. Mitchell and Vandivort were only a stroke behind.

Underwood and Matthews of Cape won Class B with a 139, outdistancing Jim Lawrence and Dick Hodder of Dexter by three strokes. A Sikeston team--Harley and Buddy Barnes--shot a 142 to tie for second.

Jim Leggett and Melvin "Churn" Williams of Bloomfield had a 148 to win the Class C championship. Two Sikeston teams tied for second--Glen Mayfield and Jay Cox, and Bill Whitson and Bryan Snyder.

Shad Old and Claude Old of Sikeston turned in a 155 to tie for first place in Class D with Phillips and Gross of New Madrid. Walter Stallings and Michael Wasson of Sikeston were a stroke back.

The highlight of the tournament was a hole-in-one by Fred Tope of Sikeston. Tope holed the par three fourth, using a two iron on the 175 yard hole. The ace was Tope's second and came twelve years after his first one, which was in 1965.

IT WAS SOME GALE

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Gale Sayers, breakaway back of the Chicago Bears in the 1960s, is one of the new members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame. They still talk in pro football circles about his incredible afternoon on Dec. 12, 1965.

The Bears were playing the San Francisco 49ers on a muddy field. Sayers scored a record-tying six touchdowns. He went in on an 80-yard pass reception, runs of 21, seven, 50 and one yards, and an 85-yard punt return. The Bears won the game, 61-20.

"It was the greatest performance I have ever seen on a football field," enthused Coach George Halas of the Bears, who coached or played with Bronko Nagurski, Ernie Nevers and Jim Thorpe.

13-year-olds win State; move to Regional

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

LEBANON— Sikeston's victory over Carthage in the 13-Year-Old State Babe Ruth Tournament wasn't a shutout, as had been their two previous victories. And the Sikeston team didn't play errorless baseball, as they had in their two outings before the Tuesday night game.

But the 13-year-old All-Stars will take it.

Sikeston trimmed a weary Carthage unit 7-3 to win the state tournament in undefeated fashion. Sikeston defeated Lebanon 3-1 last Saturday, then chalked up shutouts over Kirksville (10-0) and Carthage (7-0) Sunday and Monday before disposing of the Carthage club again Tuesday night to win it all.

The elated All-Stars can now look forward to a trip to Morehead, Minn. to play in the Midwest Plains Regional Tournament the first week in August. This is he first year that there has been competition past the state level in the 13-year-old divison.

"And we're gonna have to get out and raise some money," said Jim Green, one of the Sikeston coaches. Of course, he was referring to the financing of the Minnesota trip.

But none of the All-Stars will complain about it.

Carthage, which had been undefeated before Nick Garner shut them out Monday, had to rally in the last inning to eke out a 9-8 triumph over host Lebanon in the first game Monday night, earning the right to meet undefeated Sikeston in the contest that immediately followed. Carthage needed to win against Sikeston last night to force the double-elimination event into a fifth day of play Wednesday.

But Sikeston would have none of that.

Steve Green survived a rocky start in the first to master the Carthage squad on only five hits--three of them in the first. Once Green got in the groove, Carthage went down in order in four of the final six innings. They had only two hits and a walk after the first and never had more than one baserunner on at a time.

Sikeston staked Green to a 1-0 lead in the top of the first and might have gotten more, had it not been for some gutty pitching by Long of Carthage. Mike Hurley walked and stole second, then came around to score when Arner threw away Bert Perry's grounder to short. Perry went all the way to third on the overthrow and was there with nobody out, but Arner went to work. He got Green to fly out before throwing out Nick Garner himself. Al Merrell walked, but Phillip Carnell popped to second o end the inning.

Carthage did their only damage in the bottom ofthe first. Wright led off with a single and went to second on Shanks' tap back to the mound. McConnell singled him home and moved into scoring position when the relay was mishandled for only the second Sikeston error of the tournament. Gourley singled to put two on, and after a strikeout by Arner, Hurley booted Long's grounder to short for yet another miscue, allowing both runners to score.

But Sikeston atoned for the nightmarish first inning with four of their own in the third. Perry's leadoff hit and two straight errors on grounders to the left side resulted in a run. Al Merrell singled home another run, and a third scored on the wild throw in. Phillip Carnell grounded to shortand John Watkins popped to third, but pinch hitter Joey Kyle picked the team up with a double that chased home Merrell.

In the fifth, Nick Garner walked and went to third when a wild pickoff attempt went into the corner. Carnell lofted a sacrifice fly to make it 6-3.

Watkins singled home the last Sikeston run in the seventh after Carnell had reached on the seventh Carthage error of the day, stolen second and advanced to third on a wild pitch.

The win completed a tournament which saw Pat Collins' Sikeston unit completely dominate the play. The opposition scored in only two of 28 innings against the All-Stars, and the four errors in four games were a totral that most big league clubs would be proud of. And they averaged nearly seven runs a game againstthe best 13-year-old pitchers in the state.

Tuesday night's victory was far from bein the classiest victory in the tournament for the All-Stars, but one could forgive them for savoring it for awhile.

JBR Stars come up one win short

By Dale Forbis
Daily Standard Sports Writer

The Sikeston Express, charging its way back from the losers' bracket of the Missouri State Babe Ruth Tournament, finally was derailed in the championship game. The 14 and 15-year-olds found themselves on tournament's last day with an unenviable task: They had to beat Jefferson City twice to grab the top honor. A 2-1 victory in the first game gave the Southeast Missourians hope, but Jefferson City dashed that hope in a 10-1 romp to the title.

Scott Campbell hurled the nail-biting victory in the first game, aided by brilliant defensive plays by centerfielder Brad Noel and shortstop Scott McDowell. Campbell allowed only six hits and a walk. The Jeff City run scored in the sixth in an infield boo-boo.

Both Sikeston runs scored in the third., McDowell, who was 2-for-2, led off with a single. Basehits by Sam Copeland and Noel filled the bases. Then, Campbell grounded the ball toward short and the Jefferson City shortstop threw home -- too late to get McDowell. A two-out walk to Joey Kyle forced in the winning run.

Loser Fitzgerald allowed only five hits and fanned 10 himself.

"We'd played two games last (Monday) night and then tried to go two more tonight," pointed out manager Charles Campbell. "And that first game was a tough one. It probably took something out of them."

Kevin Self took the mound for Sikeston and Jefferson City batted around in the bottom of the first. Self had hurled a two-hit shutout just 24 hours before and simply didn't have enough rest. Three hits, a pair of walks and four errors helped the eventual winners score four times and put the game away almost before it started. Four other Sikeston pitchers followed Self to the mound, none with much more success than the starter.

The Sikeston entry scored its lone run off of Clark, the winning pitcher, on Scott Campbell's two-out single in the fifth.

"We made too many errors to count," moaned Campbell, but his team had given it a good shot. After a first game loss, the trip to the championship game was as hard one.

Cape team wins Bank scramble

A pair of Cape Girardeau golfers--Bill Kurre and David McQuarry--won top honors of the weekend in the Bank of Sikeston Annual Two-Man Scramble Golf Tournament held at the Sikeston Country Club.

Kurre and McQuarry teamed for a 65 Saturday, then turned in an even finer 63 in the Sunday round for a 36-hole total of 128. They beat another out-of-town duo--Harrison and Bayless of Memphis-- by two strokes.

Charles McPhail and John Askey of Sikeston were the winners in Class A, shooting a 135 to nip Rob Mitchell and Clayton Vandivort, also of Sikeston. Mitchell and Vandivort were only a stroke behind.

Underwood and Matthews of Cape won Class B with a 139, outdistancing Jim Lawrence and Dick Hodder of Dexter by three strokes. A Sikeston team--Harley and Buddy Barnes--shot a 142 to tie for second.

Jim Leggett and Melvin "Churn" Williams of Bloomfield had a 148 to win the Class C championship. Two Sikeston teams tied for second--Glen Mayfield and Jay Cox, and Bill Whitson and Bryan Snyder.

Shad Old and Claude Old of Sikeston turned in a 155 to tie for first place in Class D with Phillips and Gross of New Madrid. Walter Stallings and Michael Wasson of Sikeston were a stroke back.

The highlight of the tournament was a hole-in-one by Fred Tope of Sikeston. Tope holed the par three fourth, using a two iron on the 175 yard hole. The ace was Tope's second and came twelve years after his first one, which was in 1965.

IT WAS SOME GALE

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Gale Sayers, breakaway back of the Chicago Bears in the 1960s, is one of the new members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame. They still talk in pro football circles about his incredible afternoon on Dec. 12, 1965.

The Bears were playing the San Francisco 49ers on a muddy field. Sayers scored a record-tying six touchdowns. He went in on an 80-yard pass reception, runs of 21, seven, 50 and one yards, and an 85-yard punt return. The Bears won the game, 61-20.

"It was the greatest performance I have ever seen on a football field," enthused Coach George Halas of the Bears, who coached or played with Bronko Nagurski, Ernie Nevers and Jim Thorpe.

Keith Hernandez

Hernandez after homer: 'It was a long 90 feet'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Keith Hernandez was all set to apply the brakes at third base when his coach's signal caught his eye.

Waved on by Jack Krol, the St. Louis Cardinals infielder churned on rubbery legs to his first inside-the-park home run Tuesday night — just barely.

"It was a long 90 feet," said Hernandez while relaxing in a uniform coated with dirt following a 4-2 Cards victory over the Atlanta Braves.

"I just ran out of gas," he explained of an inartistic belly slide needed to reach home plate. "I'd never hit an inside-the-park home run in my life. I figured the outfielders had muffed it up or else the ball bounced back toward the infield."

Hernandez' homer, his ninth, highlighted a three-run St. Louis uprising in the opening inning at the expense of Braves right-hander Dick Ruthven, 3-7.

Lou Brock opened with a single and stole second base, the 883rd of his major league career, later scoring on Ted Simmons' two-out single.

Hernandez then worked the count to 1-1 and walloped a Ruthven change-up over the head of Rowland Office in center field.

The drive caromed off the base of the wall, skipping away from Office's grasp. Left fielder Gary Matthews finally retrieved the ball but was too late to nail the Cards runner.

Hernandez' aggressive running and similar daring by Hector Cruz while scoring in the fourth from first base on Mike Phillips' double were lauded by Cards Manager Vern Rapp.

"It reminded me of one of those airplanes that used to come in with their fuselages on the ground and their noses up," said Rapp of Hernandez' slide.

"I want to congratulate Jack Krol for his third base coaching," added Rapp. "They (Hernandez and Cruz) were two big runs. I think it showed that both baserunners weren't just satisfied to stop at third."

After Cruz boosted St. Louis' lead to 4-0, reliever Clay Carroll was hammered for Atlanta infielder Willie Montanez' 14th home run of the year, a mammoth solo shot in the sixth inning.

Junior Moore doubled and Darrel Chaney and pinch-hitter Brian Asselstine both singled off Carroll to produce another Braves run in the seventh, but Buddy Schultz came on to check the rally with the aid of a double play.

Cards starter Bob Forsch, 13-4, departed with a recurrence of strained lower back muscles after pitching a two-hitter through five scoreless innings.

"I'm sure it won't hinder his ability to make any other start unless something happens that's unforeseen," said Rapp. "He's had this condition on and off all the time."

Ring great Lou Thesz to appear at Malden

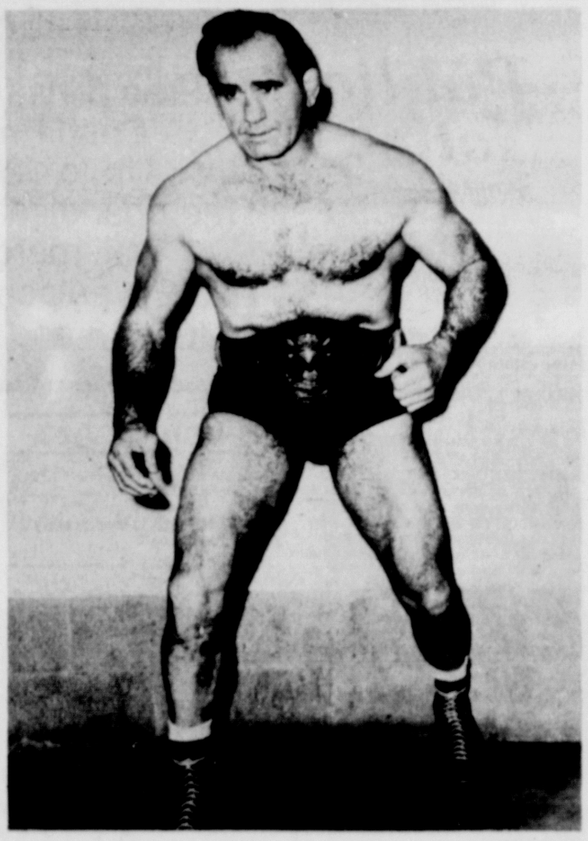
MALDEN – Lou Thesz, who has been the National Wrestling Alliance's world champion six different times between 1935 and 1963, will wrestle at Malden this Saturday night in a rare appearance in this area.

The 60-year-old protege of the immortal Ed "Strangler" Lewis, who is considered by most to be the greatest wrestler of all time, will appear on promoter Henry Rogers' 8:30 wrestling card.

Thesz, who is 60 years old but in remarkable physical condition, made a return to the ring in the mid-70's after an illustrious career that spanned four decades. Unlike today's champions of assorted associations, Lou was universally recognized as the one and only titleholder during most of his reigns.

Thesz made agility, speed and finesse his trademarks as he became probably the greatest of the scientific wrestlers. He was only 18 when he first won the NWA championship, and he was 47 when he regained it for the final time in 1963.

Thesz claims to have won more than 900 straight matches during the 1950's, when he earned more than $250,000 per year.



Dame twins win at Paducah

The Sikeston Swim Team met some of their strongest competition of the summer last Saturday at the Calvert City, Kentucky Invitational Trophy Meet. Teams from Paducah, Marion, Illinois, Cape Girardeau, Farmington, Ste. Genevieve, and Sikeston were guests of the Kentucky club.

In the girls 10 years and younger it was almost a clean sweep for Sikeston twins Melanie and Melinda Dame. Melinda edged her sister by 0.2 second in the girls freestyle and went on to win first place in both individual medley and butterfly, taking home three trophies. Melanie added a trophy for first place in breast stroke and a second in backstroke. Together the twins led their relay teams to a first in freestyle and a second in the medley relay.

Sikeston All-Stars, I-SC in finals

Offense was the name of the game last night in the Sikeston Invitational Tournament for the 9-10 year old All-Stars. The first game saw the Sikeston All-Stars bang out twelve hits and score 23 times to coast past Dexter 23-11.

The Sikeston Aces fell by the wayside in the second game of action as they were downed by Scott City 12-8. Most of those runs for both teams can be attributed to errors and walks as Scott City only had three hits while the Aces could only manage one base rap.

Sikeston scored in every inning, but Scott City scored five in the third and seven big runs in the fifth to take the lead as time ran out. Lanny Little was the loser for Sikeston and Arnzan hurled the win for Scott City. Arnzan also did well with the stick as he accounted for two of Scott City's three hits, one a triple.

Big Stan Templeton was the winner in the All-Stars even though he gave up an unusual amount of runs and hits. Dexter did their damage in the final three frames capped by five in the fifth. Those runs by Dexter made the game close as the score stood 13-11 going into the bottom half of the fifth. Sikeston then exploded for ten in the frame to ice the win. Miller charted the loss for Dexter.

Dexter and the Sikeston Aces meet at 6:30 this evening in the consolation game, prior to the 8:15 championship battle between the Sikeston All-Stars and Illmo-Scott City.

Skins' Brown calls it quits

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — He weighed only 195 pounds and stood less than 6 feet tall, but Larry Brown didn't believe in avoiding tacklers. He preferred to bowl them over for extra yardage.

And gain yardage he did, picking up 5,875 yards in his seven-year career, twice leading the National Football League in rushing and being named player of the year in 1972. Most of the yardage, 5,467, came in his first five years, before he was slowed by a knee injury.

In 1972, Brown rushed for 1,216 yards to lead the Redskins to the Super Bowl. But he took a tremendous battering from his 285 carries and his slambang, slashing running style. In his first six seasons he averaged 236 attempts.

But time and injury have taken their toll.

The Pittsburgh native underwent major surgery on his knee in 1974 and hasn't been the same since. He rushed for only 56 yards past year, averaging 2.8 yards per carry.

Brown, who will be 30 in September, came to the Redskins training camp this week determined to fulfill the last year of a three-year contract calling for about $130,000. He hoped outwardly, however, that some kind of arrangement could be worked out so that he would not have to go through the pain and agony he suffered a year ago.

On Tuesday, the Redskins announced that Brown, the team's first 1,000-yard rusher, would retire as an active player and would join the front office to assist in public relations, working with youth groups, charities and hospitals and making speaking engagements. His contract would be honored, the team said.

"There won't be many Larry Browns in a lifetime," said Coach George Allen. "He's the best back that I have ever coached. He's been a great back who has played with a lot of courage. Larry deserves to go out on top, not hanging on."

Keith Hernandez

Hernandez after homer:

'It was a long 90 feet'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Keith Hernandez was all set to apply the brakes at third base when his coach's signal caught his eye.

Waved on by Jack Krol, the St. Louis Cardinals infielder churned on rubbery legs to his first inside-the-park home run Tuesday night — just barely.

"It was a long 90 feet," said Hernandez while relaxing in a uniform coated with dirt following a 4-2 Cards victory over the Atlanta Braves.

"I just ran out of gas," he explained of an inartistic belly slide needed to reach home plate. "I'd never hit an inside-the-park home run in my life. I figured the outfielders had muffed it up or else the ball bounced back toward the infield."

Hernandez' homer, his ninth, highlighted a three-run St. Louis uprising in the opening inning at the expense of Braves right-hander Dick Ruthven, 3-7.

Lou Brock opened with a single and stole second base, the 883rd of his major league career, later scoring on Ted Simmons' two-out single.

Hernandez then worked the count to 1-1 and walloped a Ruthven change-up over the head of Rowland Office in center field.

The drive caromed off the base of the wall, skipping away from Office's grasp. Left fielder Gary Matthews finally retrieved the ball but was too late to nail the Cards runner.

Hernandez' aggressive running and similar daring by Hector Cruz while scoring in the fourth from first base on Mike Phillips' double were lauded by Cards Manager Vern Rapp.

"It reminded me of one of those airplanes that used to come in with their fuselages on the ground and their noses up," said Rapp of Hernandez' slide.

"I want to congratulate Jack Krol for his third base coaching," added Rapp. "They (Hernandez and Cruz) were two big runs. I think it showed that both baserunners weren't just satisfied to stop at third."

After Cruz boosted St. Louis' lead to 4-0, reliever Clay Carroll was hammered for Atlanta infielder Willie Montanez' 14th home run of the year, a mammoth solo shot in the sixth inning.

Junior Moore doubled and Darrel Chaney and pinch-hitter Brian Asselstine both singled off Carroll to produce another Braves run in the seventh, but Buddy Schultz came on to check the rally with the aid of a double play.

Cards starter Bob Forsch, 13-4, departed with a recurrence of strained lower back muscles after pitching a two-hitter through five scoreless innings.

"I'm sure it won't hinder his ability to make any other start unless something happens that's unforeseen," said Rapp. "He's had this condition on and off all the time."

Ring great Lou Thesz to appear at Malden

MALDEN -- Lou Thesz, who has been the National Wrestling Alliance's world champion six different times between 1935 and 1963, will wrestle at Malden this Saturday night in a rare appearance in this area.

The 60-year-old protege of the immortal Ed "Strangler" Lewis, who is considered by most to be the greatest wrestler of all time, will appear on promoter Henry Rogers' 8:30 wrestling card.

Thesz, who is 60 years old but in remarkable physical condition, made a return to the ring in the mid-70's after an illustrious career that spanned four decades. Unlike today's champions of assorted associations, Lou was universally recognized as the one and only titleholder during most of his reigns.

Thesz made agility, speed and finesse his trademarks as he became probably the greatest of the scientific wrestlers. He was only 18 when he first won the NWA championship, and he was 47 when he regained it for the final time in 1963.

Thesz claims to have won more than 900 straight matches during the 1950's, when he earned more than $250,000 per year.

Again, It's Sherlock And Watson

EXIT SHERLOCK HOLMES. By Robert Lee Hall. Scribner's. 238 Pages. $7.95.

It's time for somebody to write a novel explaining how Dr. John Watson, Sherlock Holmes' sidekick, ever got a chance to doctor.

Judging from the mounds of newly discovered manuscripts he left behind for posterity, Watson just had to have spent his days and most of his nights scribbling steadily away about the adventures he and his detective friend had but which A. Conan Doyle failed to record.

Nicholas Meyer got the vogue under way with his "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" and followed that good Sherlock adventure up with the not so good "The West End Horror." Now Robert Lee Hall has gotten into the act with "Exit Sherlock Holmes," one of 32 previously unknown manuscripts left behind by the prolific Watson in "a battered tin dispatch box."

Hall's book has an interesting beginning and an interesting ending. Unfortunately, to get from one to the other the reader has to plow through a vast arid stretch that has little to recommend it. What makes this portion dreary, perhaps, is that Holmes doesn't appear in it. The action depends entirely upon Watson, and as nice a chap as he is he's not terribly exciting.

After a brief early appearance by Holmes, in which he tells Watson that the evil Moriarty is back and meaner than ever, the great detective disappears and Watson spends page after trying page looking for him. When he finally finds him, the action picks up and the book ends in a rousing finale in which Holmes and Moriarty once again do battle.

Hall comes up with some interesting stories about Holmes' youth, and he skillfully blends in some science-fiction elements but he does belabor his theme.

The Prayer

"Do not fool yourselves by just listening to his word. Instead, put it into practice." (James 1:22 TEV)

PRAYER: Lord Jesus, we are glad that stewardship means not only giving of our possessions, but giving of ourselves. Help us always to be willing to give what God has so generously given to us, that the church may grow and prosper and that our lives may be enriched in spiritual blessing. Amen.

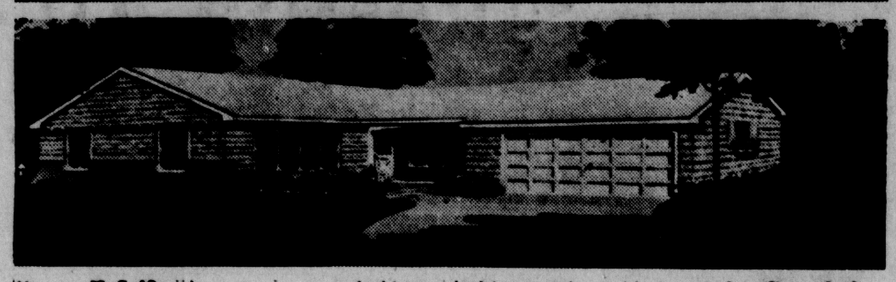
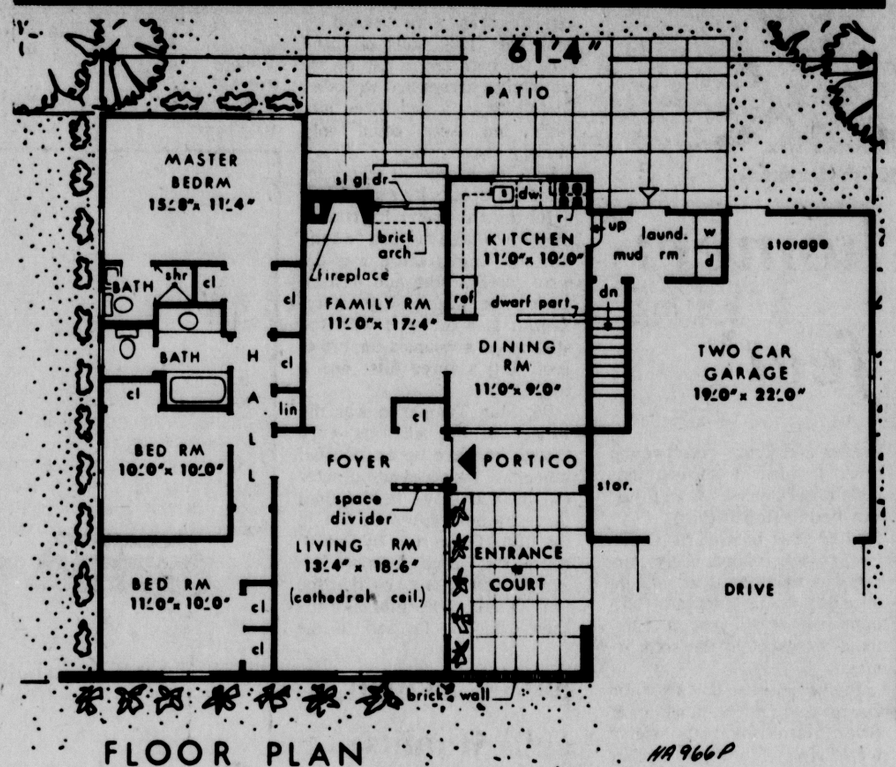
HOMES FOR AMERICANS





FLOOR PLAN HA966P

A BRICK COURTYARD gives this L-shaped ranch a distinctive entrance. The unusual floor plan features a centrally-located foyer which provides excellent circulation and enhances the feeling of space in the living room which overlooks the courtyard. Plan HA966P, designed by Samuel Paul, has 1,328 square feet of living space including three bedrooms, a family room and separate kitchen and dining room facilities. Those wishing further information may write the architect—enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope—at 107-40 Queens Blvd., Forest Hills, N.Y. 11375.

Again, It's Sherlock And Watson

EXIT SHERLOCK HOLMES. By Robert Lee Hall. Scribner's. 238 Pages. $7.95.

It's time for somebody to write a novel explaining how Dr. John Watson, Sherlock Holmes' sidekick, ever got a chance to doctor.

Judging from the mounds of newly discovered manuscripts he left behind for posterity, Watson just had to have spent his days and most of his nights scribbling steadily away about the adventures he and his detective friend had but which A. Conan Doyle failed to record.

Nicholas Meyer got the vogue under way with his "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" and followed that good Sherlock adventure up with the not so good "The West End Horror." Now Robert Lee Hall has gotten into the act with "Exit Sherlock Holmes," one of 32 previously unknown manuscripts left behind by the prolific Watson in "a battered tin dispatch box."

Hall's book has an interesting beginning and an interesting ending. Unfortunately, to get from one to the other the reader has to plow through a vast arid stretch that has little to recommend it. What makes this portion dreary, perhaps, is that Holmes doesn't appear in it. The action depends entirely upon Watson, and as nice a chap as he is he's not terribly exciting.

After a brief early appearance by Holmes, in which he tells Watson that the evil Moriarty is back and meaner than ever, the great detective disappears and Watson spends page after trying page looking for him. When he finally finds him, the action picks up and the book ends in a rousing finale in which Holmes and Moriarty once again do battle.

Hall comes up with some interesting stories about Holmes' youth, and he skillfully blends in some science-fiction elements but he does belabor his theme.

The Prayer

"Do not fool yourselves by just listening to his word. Instead, put it into practice." (James 1:22 TEV)

PRAYER: Lord Jesus, we are glad that stewardship means not only giving of our possessions, but giving of ourselves. Help us always to be willing to give what God has so generously given to us, that the church may grow and prosper and that our lives may be enriched in spiritual blessing. Amen.

Of 220 persons who were tested, 181 were found to be eligible donors; and 136 of these were first-time donors. Above, Richard Giles, 602 Moore Ave., has a blood sample drawn by Red Cross employe Barbara Hale of St. Louis. Jones says the next blood drive here will probably be conducted sometime in August.

House debates changes in food stamp program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is debating fundamental changes in the 13-year-old food stamp program, which now helps some 5.22-million families buy more to eat each month.

The proposed changes are part of a 240-page measure renewing and revising the Agriculture Department's major programs and setting national farm and food program policy through 1981.

The House has been debating the omnibus bill since last week. Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said he hoped for final passage tonight.

Proposed changes to the $5.4-billion program, worked out by the agriculture committee, would increase its costs by $150 million. President Carter had sought to hold the budget to $5.5-billion, just what it would cost if it was renewed without major changes.

Carter said this week he's pleased with the House bill. Average benefits of 27 cents per meal per person would not be changed.

The bill's major feature is an end to the requirement that eligible families pay for part of their food stamps. For example, the typical food stamp recipient pays $74 a month to get $134 in stamps to buy groceries for three persons. Assuming the family's income were the same under the new calculations required by the bill, it would get $83 in stamps if the income were from a job, or $62 if from welfare. The family would pay nothing for food stamps in either case.

About 407,160 families would be eliminated from the food stamp program immediately, the Congressional Budget Office says. But 632,000 new families would be attracted by the no-payment provision.

Most of those eliminated by the proposal to revamp the food stamp program would be families with incomes above the current federal nonfarm poverty limits. The line for the typical food stamp family of three persons is $405 a month.

In addition, 1.02 million households would have their benefits reduced, most by less than $20 a month. About 2.6 million would see no change and 1.19 million would get more help.

The proposal also contains expanded requirements for recipient to look for jobs and a number of provisions advocates say will sharply reduce opportunities for cheating and clerical errors.

On Tuesday, the House voted to:

—Reject reductions for the peanut price support program that go farther than those the Senate adopted with administration backing.

—Give food and fiber priority over such crops as tobacco in the operations of the Food for Peace program.

—Allow the Agriculture Department to act as purchasing agent for foreign countries buying U.S. crops under long-term, low-interest financing of that program so they would not have to turn to private fee-paid agents.

—Defeat an attempt to limit Food for Peace sales and to require new conflict-of-interest regulations covering recipient countries, agents and government employes who handle the $2-billion program.

Some American Indian "medicine wheels," such as one in Wyoming's Bighorn Mountains that is formed of stones placed in the shape of a 28-spoked wheel, were used as primitive astronomical instruments, researchers believe.

Couple takes camper partially paid for

A Morehouse woman reported that a Sikeston family left town with a camper it had only partially paid for, according to the Public Safety Department.

The theft of cash from a purse and a spare tire and wheel from a pickup truck were also reported.

Ann Waters told officers that she was in the process of selling the camper to Lewis and Loretta Gavil, 227 Dorothy St., and that they had paid $400 of the $700 purchase price.

They took the trailer home with them and were going to pay the remaining amount when Mrs. Waters brought them the title.

She told officers she went to the Gavil home and discovered they had left for Mexico Sunday.

The trailer is uninsured and unlicensed.

Thieves took $22 in cash and medicine from a purse belonging to Louis Thelma Stephans of Booneville between 7:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. Monday.

The purse had been left in her car while it was parked under the carport of the home of her brother, Herbert Stephens, 932 Davis Blvd.

A spare tire and wheel worth $120 was taken from the back of a pickup truck at Sikeston Motor Co. on South Main Street. The theft apparently occurred between Saturday and Monday.

U.S. trade deficit hits record high

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's trade deficit more than doubled in June to a record $2.8 billion, the 13th deficit in a row, the government reported today.

The United States sold $10.1 billion in goods abroad, a decrease of about 3 per cent, while buying $12.9 billion in products from other countries, an increase of 11 per cent, the government said.

That put the trade deficit for the month at $2.8 billion, a sharp rise from May's $1.2 billion deficit, which was the smallest of the year.

An increase in oil imports from $3.1 billion in May to $3.9 billion in June accounted for much of the higher imports, the Commerce Department said.

In a speech in Bonn, Germany, today, Asst. Secretary of Commerce Frank Wheil, said the demand for high priced foreign oil has upset the U.S. trade account so much that "it could take us a decade or more to get back into sustainable equilibrium."

Wheil told German businessmen in Bonn that the United States, as the world's largest oil importer, will have to bear its fair share of trade deficits.

Administration officials have said the continuing trade deficits should not be cause for concern because it shows the United States is contributing to economic growth in the rest of the world. They have called on West Germany and Japan, among others, to also have trade deficits this year.

However, Rep. Henry R. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, has said large deficits could lead to the depreciation of the U.S. dollar in international money markets.

In its trade report, the Commerce Department said another big contributor to the deficit was the increase of $256.7 million in imports of machinery and transport equipment. Imports in motor vehicles and parts rose by $118.2 million.

The decline in exports was spread over a broad range of products. Crude materials exports declined by $157.3 million; soybeans showed a particularly large loss at $275 million.

Exports of all food and live animals were down $86.3 million, and mineral fuels and lubricants were down $51.9 million, although coal exports increased $9 million.

Exports of machinery and transport equipment fell $114.6 million, particularly because of fewer sales abroad of aircraft, spacecraft, and parts.

The June figures brought the total trade deficit for the year to $12.6 billion, about double the $6 billion deficit recorded for all of last year.

The string of deficits began with a $431 million trade deficit in June 1976 and grew to $1.7 billion in January. In April the deficit reached its most recent record of $2.6 billion, before falling off to $1.2 billion in May.

The administration is predicting a deficit of about $23 billion to $25 billion for the year, entirely because of the oil purchases.

The Treasury Department has said that without the oil imports, the U.S. trade ledger would be in balance.

The Commerce Department, however, has begun a drive to encourage companies to sell overseas.

Radar gun discussed in closed session

BLOOMFIELD – The City Council Tuesday night discussed the resignation of the city water collector, cleaning up of the city, use of city equipment on private projects and purchase of a pickup truck.

At the request of Police Chief Jerry Johnson, the council met in a brief executive session after the public meeting.

Mayor M.E. "Bud" Bresee said this morning that use of the city's radar gun was discussed in the closed session.

Officers were discouraged because the case against a person arrested for speeding about a year before was dismissed in Stoddard County Magistrate Court, Bresee said.

He told them it's not possible to win every case and the council instructed the police department to continue using the radar equipment in patrolling city streets.

The executive session lasted about five to 10 minutes, Bresee said.

It was announced at the public part of the meeting that Wanda Holtzhouser, city water collector for the past five months and meter reader for the past three years has submitted her resignation.

She plans to change jobs, starting work at the Bloomfield post office.

She told the council that she would stay until the city could find a replacement and agreed to help her replacement get started in the job.

The council announced applications for the job are now being accepted.

The city is now in the process of cleaning up, mowing grass, cleaning up ditches and trimming limbs and shrubs blocking street corners and signs.

Bresee said the city started the project about a week ago and has received "real good" cooperation.

The council discussed whether or not it has the legal right to cut limbs from trees blocking city street signs without permission of the owner of the trees, but decided to continue with its policy of first asking permission.

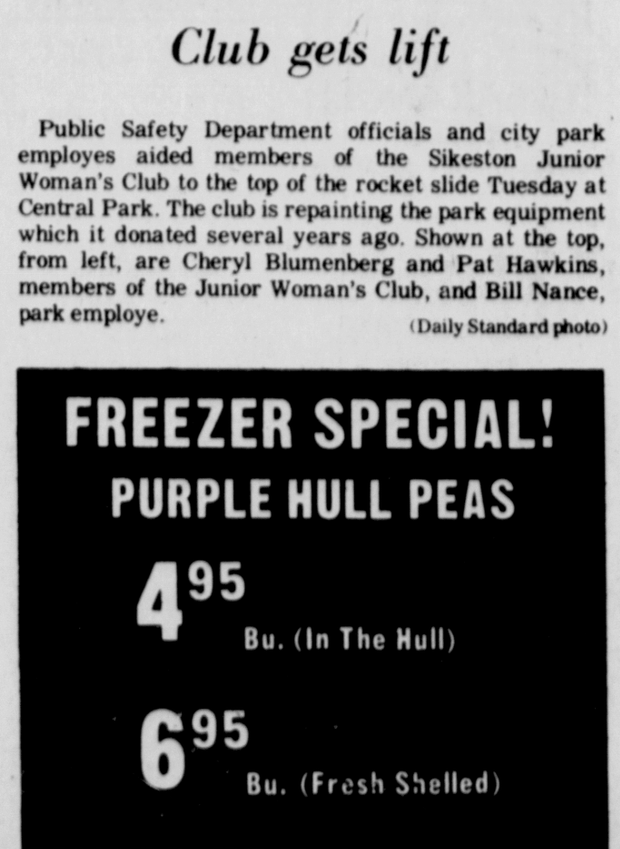
Bresee asked the council about use of city equipment on private projects after hours, saying that he had been told that when the city bought a road grader several years ago the city would do such work, but charged $20 minimum to discourage such use.

After discussion, the council decided against this policy, other than what little work is normally done.

The council decided it could not afford the added expense or trouble of doing this work.

Larry Pratt, brother-in-law of Alderman Carl Neuber, has a 1962 Dodge half-ton pickup truck for sale at $325, which the city is considering buying.

Aldermen looked at the truck Tuesday night, but postponed a decision until the next council meeting.



Club gets lift

Teasdale signs exemptions bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Sales tax exemptions for the steel platforms on which industrial pollution control devices are mounted were signed into law today by Gov. Joseph Teasdale.

Teasdale, in acting on 16 more measures that cleared during the recent legislative session, also approved a countywide sales tax for St. Louis County and authority for the state to attempt to recover from the estate of a deceased welfare recipient some of the money provided the recipient while he was alive.

The sales tax exemption gained legislative approval only after the House Rules Committee agreed in the waning days of the session to move it ahead of more than three dozen other measures to insure its consideration. The full House then rejected an amendment to the bill that would have required persons and firms receiving sales tax exemptions to report annually on how much they saved, but passed the remainder of the bill.

Lobbyists for Armco Steel Co. in Kansas City, which makes the steel for those platforms, spent more than $11,000 during the first 4½ months of the legislative session, pushing for passage of that proposal as well as several others, according to legislative records.

Backers of the proposal claimed retention of the tax on the platforms was an oversight when lawmakers exempted the pollution control devices themselves from the tax.

Under the welfare funds recovery measure, benefits paid to a welfare recipient during his life would become a debt due to the state upon his death and could be collected under the probate code if collection would not harm surviving members of the person's family. Supporters claim it will save the state $13 million a year.

The countywide sales tax when imposed by the St. Louiss County Council will end any possibility of municipalities in the county to levy their own city sales tax. Communities with a sales tax at the time will have the option to retain the revenues their tax generated previously or accept a percentage of the countywide tax revenues based on population. Cities without a sales tax will receive revenues based on population.

Other measures signed by Teasdale will:

—Lower the legal age of consent for medical treatment from 21 to 18.

—Revise the sanitation requirements for bakeries, restaurant and hotel kitchens.

—Authorize liability insurance for hospitals and hospital-owned ambulances.

—Permit hospitals to hire private attorneys.

—Remove the 15-day annual limit for state workers to serve on National Guard duty without loss of employment benefits or rights.

—Revise operations of the Missouri Veterans Home to conform to state reorganization.

Thornton found guilty of Ft. Wood murders

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP) — Johnny Lee Thornton, who claimed a dual personality caused him to kill, rape and assault, will be eligible for parole in a maximum of 10 years under federal law, court authorities said Tuesday.

Spec. 4 Thornton, a Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., military police officer, was convicted Tuesday after two hours and 20 minutes of deliberation by an eight-woman, four-man jury of one count each of first-degree murder, rape, assault with intent to kill and four counts of kidnaping. The charges stemmed from the Jan. 12 shooting deaths of three Missouri teenagers and wounding of fourth.

The defense stipulated before the trial that Thornton, a 23-year-old father of three from Russelville, Ark., committed murder, rape and assault but not kidnaping. Testimony showed there were three deaths and two rapes, because it appeared only one death and one rape occurred on government property.

No sentencing date has been set. The maximum penalty for first-degree murder is life imprisonment, but all persons convicted of federal crimes become eligible for parole in 10 years or less, U.S. District Court Judge William Collinson said.

Defense Attorney David Freeman said he did not think the verdict was affected by testimony from prosecution witness Dr. Herbert Spiegel of Columbia University in New York.

A major part of the defense involved videotaped interviews of Thornton by a defense psychiatrist, Dr. William Clary of Springfield, Mo. In the tapes, an alleged dominant personality known as "Johnny" pleaded with a sadistic submerged personality known as "John" to leave him alone and not hurt anyone.

Dr. Spiegel, who had examined the multiple personality known as "Sybil," subject of a television movie, said he believed Thornton was "coached" by Clary during the interview.

Freeman used his closing arguments to try to discredit Spiegel's testimony. He said Spiegel was paid $1,500 per day plus expenses to testify. Spiegel, he said, "got the call and the price was right so the hired gun showed."

Attorney J. Whitfield Moody denied Freeman's allegation that the prosecution had tried to "tamper with justice" by paying such a sum.

"Mr. Freeman doesn't tell you how you're supposed to convict one John and set one free. He just wants you to set them both free," Moody told jurors.

Moody reminded jurors that Thornton checked out two pairs of handcuffs on the night of the slayings while saying he was going to "play supercop," and that he filed a report of shooting wild dogs to account for his use of bullets, even though the dogs' carcasses were never found.

Linda Needham, 16, Anthony Lee Bates, 18 and Wesley Hawkins, 18, all of Plato, Mo., were killeed and Juanita Deckard, 19, of Lynchburg, Mo., was wounded during the night of Jan. 12.

The prosecution said Thornton stoppd the double-daters, told them their car matched the description of one used in a robbery, then handcuffed and shot the two boys in his Jeep. He then allegedly drove all four to a game warden's cabin, forced the girls to perform sexual acts, and then shot the girls as well.

Miss Deeckard, left for dead in a snowbank, was able to struggle through several miles of rugged terrain before finding help at a farm house.

Following the verdict, Deanie and Bruce Thornton, the defendant's mother and stepfather, refused to comment as the elder Thornton escorted his tearful wife from the courtroom. Four women jurors also cried, but no jurors would comment.

House debates changes in food stamp program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is debating fundamental changes in the 13-year-old food stamp program, which now helps some 5.23-million families buy more to eat each month.

The proposed changes are part of a 240-page measure renewing and revising the Agriculture Department's major programs and setting national farm and food program policy through 1981.

The House has been debating the omnibus bill since last week. Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said he hoped for final passage tonight.

Proposed changes to the $5.4-billion program, worked out by the agriculture committee, would increase its costs by $150 million. President Carter had sought to hold the budget to $5.5-billion, just what it would cost if it was renewed without major changes.

Carter said this week he's pleased with the House bill. Average benefits of 27 cents per meal per person would not be changed.

The bill's major feature is an end to the requirement that eligible families pay for part of their food stamps. For example, the typical food stamp recipient pays $74 a month to get $134 in stamps to buy groceries for three persons. Assuming the family's income were the same under the new calculations required by the bill, it would get $83 in stamps if the income were from a job, or $62 if from welfare. The family would pay nothing for food stamps in either case.

About 407,160 families would be eliminated from the food stamp program immediately, the Congressional Budget Office says. But 632,000 new families would be attracted by the no-payment provision.

Most of those eliminated by the proposal to revamp the food stamp program would be families with incomes above the current federal nonfarm poverty limits. The line for the typical food stamp family of three persons is $405 a month.

In addition, 1.02 million households would have their benefits reduced, most by less than $20 a month. About 2.6 million would see no change and 1.19 million would get more help.

The proposal also contains expanded requirements for recipient to look for jobs and a number of provisions advocates say will sharply reduce opportunities for cheating and clerical errors.

On Tuesday, the House voted to:

—Reject reductions for the peanut price support program that go farther than those the Senate adopted with administration backing.

—Give food and fiber priority over such crops as tobacco in the operations of the Food for Peace program.

—Allow the Agriculture Department to act as purchasing agent for foreign countries buying U.S. crops under long-term, low-interest financing of that program so they would not have to turn to private fee-paid agents.

—Defeat an attempt to limit Food for Peace sales and to require new conflict-of-interest regulations covering recipient countries, agents and government employes who handle the $2-billion program.

Some American Indian "medicine wheels," such as one in Wyoming's Bighorn Mountains that is formed of stones placed in the shape of a 28-spoked wheel, were used as primitive astronomical instruments, researchers believe.

Couple takes camper partially paid for

A Morehouse woman reported that a Sikeston family left town with a camper it had only partially paid for, according to the Public Safety Department.

The theft of cash from a purse and a spare tire and wheel from a pickup truck were also reported.

Ann Waters told officers that she was in the process of selling the camper to Lewis and Loretta Gavil, 227 Dorothy St., and that they had paid $400 of the $700 purchase price.

They took the trailer home with them and were going to pay the remaining amount when Mrs. Waters brought them the title.

She told officers she went to the Gavil home and discovered they had left for Mexico Sunday.

The trailer is uninsured and unlicensed.

Thieves took $22 in cash and medicine from a purse belonging to Louis Thelma Stephans of Booneville between 7:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. Monday.

The purse had been left in her car while it was parked under the carport of the home of her brother, Herbert Stephens, 932 Davis Blvd.

U.S. trade deficit hits record high

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's trade deficit more than doubled in June to a record $2.8 billion, the 13th deficit in a row, the government reported today.

The United States sold $10.1 billion in goods abroad, a decrease of about 3 per cent, while buying $12.9 billion in products from other countries, an increase of 11 per cent, the government said.

That put the trade deficit for the month at $2.8 billion, a sharp rise from May's $1.2 billion deficit, which was the smallest of the year.

An increase in oil imports from $3.1 billion in May to $3.9 billion in June accounted for much of the higher imports, the Commerce Department said.

In a speech in Bonn, Germany, today, Asst. Secretary of Commerce Frank Wheil, said the demand for high priced foreign oil has upset the U.S. trade account so much that "it could take us a decade or more to get back into sustainable equilibrium."

Wheil told German businessmen in Bonn that the United States, as the world's largest oil importer, will have to bear its fair share of trade deficits.

Administration officials have said the continuing trade deficits should not be cause for concern because it shows the United States is contributing to economic growth in the rest of the world. They have called on West Germany and Japan, among others, to also have trade deficits this year.

However, Rep. Henry R. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, has said large deficits could lead to the depreciation of the U.S. dollar in international money markets.

In its trade report, the Commerce Department said another big contributor to the deficit was the increase of $256.7 million in imports of machinery and transport equipment. Imports in motor vehicles and parts rose by $118.2 million.

The decline in exports was spread over a broad range of products. Crude materials exports declined by $157.3 million; soybeans showed a particularly large loss at $275 million.

Exports of all food and live animals were down $86.3 million, and mineral fuels and lubricants were down $51.9 million, although coal exports increased $9 million.

Exports of machinery and transport equipment fell $114.6 million, particularly because of fewer sales abroad of aircraft, spacecraft, and parts.

The June figures brought the total trade deficit for the year to $12.6 billion, about double the $6 billion deficit recorded for all of last year.

The string of deficits began with a $431 million trade deficit in June 1976 and grew to $1.7 billion in January. In April the deficit reached its most recent record of $2.6 billion, before falling off to $1.2 billion in May.

The administration is predicting a deficit of about $23 billion to $25 billion for the year, entirely because of the oil purchases.

The Treasury Department has said that without the oil imports, the U.S. trade ledger would be in balance.

The Commerce Department, however, has begun a drive to encourage companies to sell overseas.

Radar gun discussed in closed session

BLOOMFIELD – The City Council Tuesday night discussed the resignation of the city water collector, cleaning up of the city, use of city equipment on private projects and purchase of a pickup truck.

At the request of Police Chief Jerry Johnson, the council met in a brief executive session after the public meeting.

Mayor M.E. "Bud" Bresee said this morning that use of the city's radar gun was discussed in the closed session.

Officers were discouraged because the case against a person arrested for speeding about a year before was dismissed in Stoddard County Magistrate Court, Bresee said.

He told them it's not possible to win every case and the council instructed the police department to continue using the radar equipment in patrolling city streets.

The executive session lasted about five to 10 minutes, Bresee said.

It was announced at the public part of the meeting that Wanda Holtzhouser, city water collector for the past five months and meter reader for the past three years has submitted her resignation.

She plans to change jobs, starting work at the Bloomfield post office.

She told the council that she would stay until the city could find a replacement and agreed to help her replacement get started in the job.

The council announced applications for the job are now being accepted.

The city is now in the process of cleaning up, mowing grass, cleaning up ditches and trimming limbs and shrubs blocking street corners and signs.

Bresee said the city started the project about a week ago and has received "real good" cooperation.

The council discussed whether or not it has the legal right to cut limbs from trees blocking city street signs without permission of the owner of the trees, but decided to continue with its policy of first asking permission.

Bresee asked the council about use of city equipment on private projects after hours, saying that he had been told that when the city bought a road grader several years ago the city would do such work, but charged $20 minimum to discourage such use.

After discussion, the council decided against this policy, other than what little work is normally done.

The council decided it could not afford the added expense or trouble of doing this work.

Larry Pratt, brother-in-law of Alderman Carl Neuber, has a 1962 Dodge half-ton pickup truck for sale at $325, which the city is considering buying.

Aldermen looked at the truck Tuesday night, but postponed a decision until the next council meeting.

Teasdale signs exemptions bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Sales tax exemptions for the steel platforms on which industrial pollution control devices are mounted were signed into law today by Gov. Joseph Teasdale.

Teasdale, in acting on 16 more measures that cleared during the recent legislative session, also approved a countywide sales tax for St. Louis County and authority for the state to attempt to recover from the estate of a deceased welfare recipient some of the money provided the recipient while he was alive.

The sales tax exemption gained legislative approval only after the House Rules Committee agreed in the waning days of the session to move it ahead of more than three dozen other measures to insure its consideration. The full House then rejected an amendment to the bill that would have required persons and firms receiving sales tax exemptions to report annually on how much they saved, but passed the remainder of the bill.

Lobbyists for Armco Steel Co. in Kansas City, which makes the steel for those platforms, spent more than $11,000 during the first 4½ months of the legislative session, pushing for passage of that proposal as well as several others, according to legislative records.

Backers of the proposal claimed retention of the tax on the platforms was an oversight when lawmakers exempted the pollution control devices themselves from the tax.

Under the welfare funds recovery measure, benefits paid to a welfare recipient during his life would become a debt due to the state upon his death and could be collected under the probate code if collection would not harm surviving members of the person's family. Supporters claim it will save the state $13 million a year.

The countywide sales tax when imposed by the St. Louiss County Council will end any possibility of municipalities in the county to levy their own city sales tax. Communities with a sales tax at the time will have the option to retain the revenues their tax generated previously or accept a percentage of the countywide tax revenues based on population. Cities without a sales tax will receive revenues based on population.

Other measures signed by Teasdale will:

—Lower the legal age of consent for medical treatment from 21 to 18.

—Revise the sanitation requirements for bakeries, restaurant and hotel kitchens.

—Authorize liability insurance for hospitals and hospital-owned ambulances.

—Permit hospitals to hire private attorneys.

—Remove the 15-day annual limit for state workers to serve on National Guard duty without loss of employment benefits or rights.

—Revise operations of the Missouri Veterans Home to conform to state reorganization.

Thornton found guilty of Ft. Wood murders

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP) — Johnny Lee Thornton, who claimed a dual personality caused him to kill, rape and assault, will be eligible for parole in a maximum of 10 years under federal law, court authorities said Tuesday.

Spec. 4 Thornton, a Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., military police officer, was convicted Tuesday after two hours and 20 minutes of deliberation by an eight-woman, four-man jury of one count each of first-degree murder, rape, assault with intent to kill and four counts of kidnaping. The charges stemmed from the Jan. 12 shooting deaths of three Missouri teenagers and wounding of fourth.

The defense stipulated before the trial that Thornton, a 23-year-old father of three from Russelville, Ark., committed murder, rape and assault but not kidnaping. Testimony showed there were three deaths and two rapes, because it appeared only one death and one rape occurred on government property.

No sentencing date has been set. The maximum penalty for first-degree murder is life imprisonment, but all persons convicted of federal crimes become eligible for parole in 10 years or less, U.S. District Court Judge William Collinson said.

Defense Attorney David Freeman said he did not think the verdict was affected by testimony from prosecution witness Dr. Herbert Spiegel of Columbia University in New York.

A major part of the defense involved videotaped interviews of Thornton by a defense psychiatrist, Dr. William Clary of Springfield, Mo. In the tapes, an alleged dominant personality known as "Johnny" pleaded with a sadistic submerged personality known as "John" to leave him alone and not hurt anyone.

Dr. Spiegel, who had examined the multiple personality known as "Sybil," subject of a television movie, said he believed Thornton was "coached" by Clary during the interview.

Freeman used his closing arguments to try to discredit Spiegel's testimony. He said Spiegel was paid $1,500 per day plus expenses to testify. Spiegel, he said, "got the call and the price was right so the hired gun showed."

Attorney J. Whitfield Moody denied Freeman's allegation that the prosecution had tried to "tamper with justice" by paying such a sum.

"Mr. Freeman doesn't tell you how you're supposed to convict one John and set one free. He just wants you to set them both free," Moody told jurors.

Moody reminded jurors that Thornton checked out two pairs of handcuffs on the night of the slayings while saying he was going to "play supercop," and that he filed a report of shooting wild dogs to account for his use of bullets, even though the dogs' carcasses were never found.

Linda Needham, 16, Anthony Lee Bates, 18 and Wesley Hawkins, 18, all of Plato, Mo., were killeed and Juanita Deckard, 19, of Lynchburg, Mo., was wounded during the night of Jan. 12.

The prosecution said Thornton stoppd the double-daters, told them their car matched the description of one used in a robbery, then handcuffed and shot the two boys in his Jeep. He then allegedly drove all four to a game warden's cabin, forced the girls to perform sexual acts, and then shot the girls as well.

Miss Deeckard, left for dead in a snowbank, was able to struggle through several miles of rugged terrain before finding help at a farm house.

Following the verdict, Deanie and Bruce Thornton, the defendant's mother and stepfather, refused to comment as the elder Thornton escorted his tearful wife from the courtroom. Four women jurors also cried, but no jurors would comment.

Prince Philip- Townsend rift blamed for blocking marriage

LONDON (AP) — Prince Philip, motivated by both personal dislike and concern for the royal family, was instrumental in blocking the marriage of his sister-in-law, Princess Margaret, and war hero Peter Townsend 22 years ago, according to a new biography of the princess.

Philip bore a grievance against Townsend because the Royal Air Force fighter pilot, as an adviser to King George VI, had counseled the king to prolong the courtship and delay the marriage of Philip and Elizabeth, the future queen, the book says.

Austrian author Willi Frischauer's "Margaret — Princess without a Cause" paints a vivid picture of the love affairs of the two princesses and of an electrifying clash of temperaments behind the scenes at Buckingham Palace.

Margaret's abortive romance with the divorced Townsend was headline news around the world in 1955, when she finally announced she would not marry him.

The princess' eventual marriage five years later to photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones broke down last year and the couple, who have two children, live separately. Townsend is now married and lives in France.

Frischauer writes that after World War II Philip, a naval officer courting Elizabeth, and Townsend, a military member of the royal household, were "incompatible and jousting in a narrow space big enough for only one."

King George, who had no son, admired the handsome and dashing air force officer and soon promoted him to deputy master of the household. "I'd have liked a boy like Townsend," the author says the king once told Margaret.

According to palace insiders, Townsend, as the king's closest adviser, inspired a plan in 1946 to keep Elizabeth and Philip from a quick marriage so the king could "observe Philip over a time at close quarters before deciding whether he could become a member of the royal family," Frischauer writes.

Philip was furious when he found out about Townsend's intervention. The king followed Townsend's advice, the author says, but in November 1947, Philip and Elizabeth married, with the king's blessing.

Margaret then became the center of attention. Though linked by gossip to every available young man of birth and rank, the only man in her life was Townsend, Frischauer writes.

But the 12-year friendship and romance of Margaret and Townsend was doomed. The king's death in February 1952 "robbed the lovers of a supporter who loved them both as much as they loved each other," Frischauer says, and a group of courtiers headed by Philip began applying pressure on Margaret to drop Townsend.

The queen, though sympathetic with her sister, told her that the affair was "undermining the dignity of the throne."

'Kite Lady' turns hobby into business

DAMARISCOTTA, Maine (AP) — Tourists stare, children smile and the sky flashes with color when Kitty Corti's van pulls into town.

In summer tourist havens along the Maine coast, Kitty is known as "the kite lady," peddling kites from the back of her converted mail delivery truck.

There are 30 different kinds, all shapes, sizes, colors and materials: bats, butterflies, falcons and centipedes; space birds, air scoops and Donald Duck models; kites with names like French military, Jalbert parafoil, Vic fighter and Peter Powell stunster.

If the wind is still, business stagnates. But when the breeze picks up, Kitty launches a 45-foot orange dragon kite or a multicolored wind sock, luring curiosity seekers and potential customers.

Kitty's truck is as much an eyecatcher as her kites. Purchased from the Waterville Post Office, it's bright yellow and orange, with her trade name, "The Kat's Kite," painted along the sides.

Although she flew kites as a child in North Tonawanda, N.Y., Kitty didn't discover how much fun they could be until she visited San Francisco, a mecca for kite flyers, three years ago. She got hooked.

"It's a free feeling, when the wind is blowing and the kite is dancing in the sky. All you need is a breeze and some open space," said the 34-year-old high school art teacher from Winslow.

Her hobby became a business when she sought a summer job that would let her travel, meet people, remain outdoors and be her own boss.

Now, weather permitting, she parks her van at fairs and festivals, hitting tourist haunts like Wiscasset, Newcastle, Bristol and Damariscotta, attracting children wherever she goes.

But kite flying, she insists, is too much fun to be left to kids.

"That's a probled,t' she sa3t) "A potentiidz jh,mer needs an excuse to come up to talk to me. They're embarrassed to be interested in kites."

Kitty's commercially produced kites range from $1 to $35, and she also sells handmade ones from $8.50 up. Her own custom designs, monogrammed on satin, can run to more than $100.

While some customers buy kites, string and reels by the armful, others balk at the price.

"People are suspicious of paying over 49 cents for a kite. To them it's just a toy, and they always remember paying 49 cents or making them out of paper bags," she said.

The Lives Of Two Funnymen

BUD & LOU. By Bob Thomas. Lippincott. 224 Pages. $10.

The taller of the two men spoke: "Now on our ballclub, the fellas have peculiar names," he would say in his rasping voice. "Who's on first, What's on Second, I Don't-Know's on third..." And so would begin the now classic comedy routine that was to become the trademark of "Bud & Lou" — better known as Abbott and Costello.

Beginning in burlesque and progressing to radio, movies and television, this comedy duo amassed a loyal and large coterie of fans. Bud Abbott, the tall, lean half of the duo, was the straight man, the quick-talking carnival barker type always out to bewilder, frustrate and connive partner Lou Costello, short and chubby, the simpleminded manchild.Abbott was the villain, Costello, the victim.

But that was only on stage. In real life, Costello is revealed as a shrewd, relentless businessman and a selfish and conceited star. Abbott, on the other hand, emerges as a devoted performer who often made sacrifices for the welfare of his "little buddy" and his desire to keep the duo intact.

Bob Thomas, a veteran reporter of Hollywood goings-on and author of several books on the entertainment field, has done a splendid job in illuminating the little-known private lives and the less-than-harmonious relationship of these two comics. Though Abbott and Costello were pure low-grade high-jinks on stage, privately their lives were clouded with tragedies. Costello, battling rheumatic fever, grieving at the drowning death of his baby son, was a man who made threats unless his often-outrageous demands were met. They usually were, and often Abbott, who had his own problems with epilepsy, the taxman, etc., was the victim.

This book is a fine chronicle of the surprisingly tragic lives and careers of two funnymen. More importantly, perhaps, it strips the gold-plate of Hollywood glamor down to the bare metal.

'Kite Lady' turns hobby into business

DAMARISCOTTA, Maine (AP) — Tourists stare, children smile and the sky flashes with color when Kitty Corti's van pulls into town.

In summer tourist havens along the Maine coast, Kitty is known as "the kite lady," peddling kites from the back of her converted mail delivery truck.

There are 30 different kinds, all shapes, sizes, colors and materials: bats, butterflies, falcons and centipedes; space birds, air scoops and Donald Duck models; kites with names like French military, Jalbert parafoil, Vic fighter and Peter Powell stunster.

If the wind is still, business stagnates. But when the breeze picks up, Kitty launches a 45-foot orange dragon kite or a multicolored wind sock, luring curiosity seekers and potential customers.

Kitty's truck is as much an eyecatcher as her kites. Purchased from the Waterville Post Office, it's bright yellow and orange, with her trade name, "The Kat's Kite," painted along the sides.

Although she flew kites as a child in North Tonawanda, N.Y., Kitty didn't discover how much fun they could be until she visited San Francisco, a mecca for kite flyers, three years ago. She got hooked.

"It's a free feeling, when the wind is blowing and the kite is dancing in the sky. All you need is a breeze and some open space," said the 34-year-old high school art teacher from Winslow.

Her hobby became a business when she sought a summer job that would let her travel, meet people, remain outdoors and be her own boss.

Now, weather permitting, she parks her van at fairs and festivals, hitting tourist haunts like Wiscasset, Newcastle, Bristol and Damariscotta, attracting children wherever she goes.

But kite flying, she insists, is too much fun to be left to kids.

"That's a probled,t' she sa3t) "A potentiidz jh,mer needs an excuse to come up to talk to me. They're embarrassed to be interested in kites."

Kitty's commercially produced kites range from $1 to $35, and she also sells handmade ones from $8.50 up. Her own custom designs, monogrammed on satin, can run to more than $100.

While some customers buy kites, string and reels by the armful, others balk at the price.

"People are suspicious of paying over 49 cents for a kite. To them it's just a toy, and they always remember paying 49 cents or making them out of paper bags," she said.

The Lives Of Two Funnymen

BUD & LOU. By Bob Thomas. Lippincott. 224 Pages. $10.

The taller of the two men spoke: "Now on our ballclub, the fellas have peculiar names," he would say in his rasping voice. "Who's on first, What's on Second, I Don't-Know's on third..." And so would begin the now classic comedy routine that was to become the trademark of "Bud & Lou" — better known as Abbott and Costello.

Beginning in burlesque and progressing to radio, movies and television, this comedy duo amassed a loyal and large coterie of fans. Bud Abbott, the tall, lean half of the duo, was the straight man, the quick-talking carnival barker type always out to bewilder, frustrate and connive partner Lou Costello, short and chubby, the simpleminded manchild. Abbott was the villain, Costello, the victim.

But that was only on stage. In real life, Costello is revealed as a shrewd, relentless businessman and a selfish and conceited star. Abbott, on the other hand, emerges as a devoted performer who often made sacrifices for the welfare of his "little buddy" and his desire to keep the duo intact.

Bob Thomas, a veteran reporter of Hollywood goings-on and author of several books on the entertainment field, has done a splendid job in illuminating the little-known private lives and the less-than-harmonious relationship of these two comics. Though Abbott and Costello were pure low-grade high-jinks on stage, privately their lives were clouded with tragedies. Costello, battling rheumatic fever, grieving at the drowning death of his baby son, was a man who made threats unless his often-outrageous demands were met. They usually were, and often Abbott, who had his own problems with epilepsy, the taxman, etc., was the victim.

This book is a fine chronicle of the surprisingly tragic lives and careers of two funnymen. More importantly, perhaps, it strips the gold-plate of Hollywood glamor down to the bare metal.

The Pita Potluck

Foolproof Food For Part-Time Cooks

How to throw a party in no time — I mean, literally no time. Update the potluck. You supply the place and ask your single friends to bring the dinner. For perfect results, plan a menu of foolproof food that's both quick and inexpensive. Here is a party meal that's so easy to prepare a busy bachelor, male or female, can throw together any of the dishes in record time.

The deliciously different entree is Beef Souvlakia stuffed into pocket shaped pita bread. This pancake shaped bread, Middle Eastern in origin, has become so popular that it's now available in most supermarkets. Slit with a knife to form a pocket. Stuff with beef stew meat which has been cooked with onions, green peppers and flavorful Contadina tomato paste and seasonings. Garnish as directed and serve with a flourish. These hot sandwiches really qualify as festive party fare!

Along with the pita sandwiches, serve a raw vegetable platter. It helps to balance the meal nutritionally, and the crunchy texture provides a welcome contrast.

For a glorious finale assign Cherry Cream Tarts to any of your friends. Baking expertise isn't necessary. With the help of a commercial pie-crust mix, this extravaganza is much easier than it looks, and much lower in calories than it looks too, thanks to the use of instant nonfat dry milk crystals in lieu of cream.

In no time at all a few part-time cooks can put together a super-party, thanks to this foolproof menu. Try it, you'll like it!

Beef Souvlakia
(Makes 18 sandwiches, about 12 servings)

- 4 pounds beef stew meat
- 1/3 cup butter
- 1 3/4 cups water
- 2 1/2 cups sliced onions
- 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
- 2 crushed garlic cloves
- 1 1/3 cups (2 6-ounce cans) Contadina Tomato Paste
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 3/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2-3 teaspoons crushed oregano leaves
- 1 teaspoon crushed thyme leaves
- 3/4 teaspoon crushed rosemary leaves
- 3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
- 18 small pita pocket breads*
- 1 cup (8-ounce carton) plain yogurt
- 1 cup (1 medium) thinly sliced onion
- 3-4 thinly sliced medium tomatoes
- 8 cups (1 medium head) shredded iceberg lettuce

Cut meat into 1/2-inch pieces. Brown meat (one third at a time) in butter in large (14-inch) skillet. Remove meat as it browns. Combine 1/4 cup water, 2 1/2 cups sliced onions, green pepper and garlic in skillet; cook 5 minutes. Add remaining 1 1/2 cups water and tomato paste. Blend thoroughly. Stir in salt, pepper, oregano, thyme, rosemary, vinegar and meat. Heat to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, 50 to 60 minutes or until meat is tender. Warm pita bread, if desired. Split each half-way to form pocket. Spread inside of each with 1 tablespoon yogurt. Place 1/3-1/2 cup meat mixture in each bread. Add sliced onion, tomatoes and shredded lettuce as desired. Serve at once.

*If pita bread is not available, use 18 medium French rolls. Split part-way through and scoop out bread inside. Fill as above.

Cherry Cream Tart
(Makes 12 servings)

Pastry for 10-inch pie

- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1/3 cup cornstarch
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/2 cups Carnation Instant Nonfat Dry Milk crystals plus water to make 3 cups
- 2 well beaten eggs
- 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1/3 cup sliced almonds
- 2 cups (21-ounce can) cherry pie filling

Roll out pastry to 13-inch circle. Fit into 11 x 1-inch metal tart pan or 10-inch pie plate. Prick with fork. Bake in hot oven (400°F.) 15 minutes. Combine sugar, cornstarch and salt in medium saucepan. Mix well. Combine liquid instant milk and eggs; gradually add to saucepan. Cook over medium heat until mixture boils; stirring constantly. Continue cooking and stirring 1 minute. Remove from heat; stir in vanilla and butter. Cool 15 minutes. Sprinkle almonds on bottom of tart shell. Pour milk mixture over almonds. Cover with waxed paper. Chill 2 hours or until firm. Spoon cherry pie filling over tart. Chill 30 minutes.

FRIENDLY PEOPLE... FRIENDLY SERVICE... AT YOUR SAFEWAY

This Danish Singer Has 'Sole'

When Denmark's Queen Margarethe II visited the U.S. recently, lyric soprano Inga Hulgaard sang for her and her royal party. Formerly a member of the Jutland Opera Company in Denmark, and a graduate of the Westchester, N. Y., Conservatory of Music, the quietly elegant woman is married to Erling Hulgaard, Fisheries Attaché, Vice-Consul, assigned to the Danish Consulate in New York.

In her dual role as performing artist and diplomat's wife, Mrs. Hulgaard says that entertaining is a "constant" in her life. But whether it's a last-minute gathering after rehearsal, a large reception or small dinner, there's always fish from the icy North Atlantic waters of her native Denmark on the menu.

"It's Erling's profession, after all," she laughed, quickly adding that most Danes do indeed eat high protein, low calorie fish regularly — "almost 51 pounds per person annually." "But," she continued, "the frozen fish fillets available almost everywhere in the states can be prepared so many ways I never really have to look for new menu ideas."

She recommends hearty chowder for casual winter get-togethers; a chilled Perch/fresh vegetable salad for a summer reception; Sole fillets sautee'd in butter with tarragon, or Haddock baked in white wine sauce for dinner. And, regularly, she prepares "my mother's Masked Cauliflower to serve as first course, buffet salad or main dish at a light supper. It's a typical Danish party dish, nice because all the ingredients can be prepared ahead, then assembled just before serving."

Danish Masked Cauliflower

- 1 lb. frozen North Atlantic Sole or Flounder Fillets
- 2 cups dry white wine
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon white pepper
- 1 bay leaf
- 2 lemon slices
- 1 medium head cauliflower, cooked til just tender, chilled
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups reserved fish cooking liquid
- 1/4 cup whipping cream, whipped
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 1 (4-1/2 oz.) can tiny shrimp, drained, rinsed and chilled (reserve 1/4 cup for garnish)

Place frozen block fish in 10" skillet; add wine, salt, pepper, bay leaf and lemon slices. Bring liquid to boil, cover, reduce heat and simmer 4 minutes; gently separate fillets and simmer 4 minutes more. Remove from liquid with slotted spatula; strain liquid and reserve for sauce. Break fish into 1" chunks; chill.

Melt butter and stir in flour; cook over low heat for one minute. Stir in fish cooking liquid; cook and stir until thick. Cool. Just before serving, stir in whipped cream, mayonnaise; gently fold chunked fish and shrimp into sauce. Spoon over chilled cauliflower and garnish.

Platter Garnish

- 1/2 cucumber, sliced
- 5 hard cooked eggs, halved
- 1/4 cup shrimp
- 10 cherry tomatoes, halved
- 1 (2-oz.) jar lumpfish caviar
- 2 lemons, cut in wedges
- Fresh dill or parsley

Place cucumber wheels around base of cauliflower; spoon 1/2 teaspoon caviar on each tomato; arrange shrimp on egg halves. Alternate tomatoes, eggs and lemons around cauliflower. Decorate with dill or parsley sprigs.

This Danish Singer Has 'Sole'

When Denmark's Queen Margarethe II visited the U.S. recently, lyric soprano Inga Hulgaard sang for her and her royal party. Formerly a member of the Jutland Opera Company in Denmark, and a graduate of the Westchester, N. Y., Conservatory of Music, the quietly elegant woman is married to Erling Hulgaard, Fisheries Attaché, Vice-Consul, assigned to the Danish Consulate in New York.

In her dual role as performing artist and diplomat's wife, Mrs. Hulgaard says that entertaining is a "constant" in her life. But whether it's a last-minute gathering after rehearsal, a large reception or small dinner, there's always fish from the icy North Atlantic waters of her native Denmark on the menu.

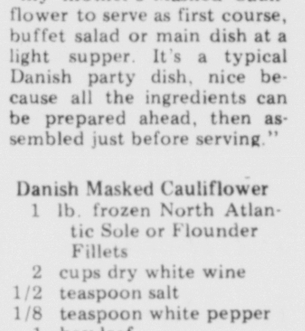
"It's Erling's profession, after all," she laughed, quickly adding that most Danes do indeed eat high protein, low calorie fish regularly — "almost 51 pounds per person annually." "But," she continued, "the frozen fish fillets available almost everywhere in the states can be prepared so many ways I never really have to look for new menu ideas."

She recommends hearty chowder for casual winter get-togethers; a chilled Perch/fresh vegetable salad for a summer reception; Sole fillets sautee'd in butter with tarragon, or Haddock baked in white wine sauce for dinner. And, regularly, she prepares "my mother's Masked Cauliflower to serve as first course, buffet salad or main dish at a light supper. It's a typical Danish party dish, nice because all the ingredients can be prepared ahead, then assembled just before serving."

Danish Masked Cauliflower

- 1 lb. frozen North Atlantic Sole or Flounder Fillets
- 2 cups dry white wine
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon white pepper
- 1 bay leaf
- 2 lemon slices
- 1 medium head cauliflower, cooked til just tender, chilled
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups reserved fish cooking liquid
- 1/4 cup whipping cream, whipped
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 1 (4-1/2 oz.) can tiny shrimp, drained, rinsed and chilled (reserve 1/4 cup for garnish)

Place frozen block fish in 10" skillet; add wine, salt, pepper, bay leaf and lemon slices. Bring liquid to boil, cover, reduce heat and simmer 4 minutes; gently separate fillets and simmer 4 minutes more. Remove from liquid with slotted spatula; strain liquid and reserve for sauce. Break fish into 1" chunks; chill.



Melt butter and stir in flour; cook over low heat for one minute. Stir in fish cooking liquid; cook and stir until thick. Cool. Just before serving, stir in whipped cream, mayonnaise; gently fold chunked fish and shrimp into sauce. Spoon over chilled cauliflower and garnish.

Platter Garnish

- 1/2 cucumber, sliced
- 5 hard cooked eggs, halved
- 1/4 cup shrimp
- 10 cherry tomatoes, halved
- 1 (2-oz.) jar lumpfish caviar
- 2 lemons, cut in wedges
- Fresh dill or parsley

Place cucumber wheels around base of cauliflower; spoon 1/2 teaspoon caviar on each tomato; arrange shrimp on egg halves. Alternate tomatoes, eggs and lemons around cauliflower. Decorate with dill or parsley sprigs.

4 credit insurance firms eyed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State Insurance Director Jerry Buxton said his office will begin investigations of four insurance companies handling credit insurance in the state.

Buxton said he understands the four, which are among the largest credit insurance firms in Missouri, "have chosen to try to circumvent the legislative intent" of a new state law regulating the rates charged for credit insurance.

The new law, which will go into effect Sept. 28, calls for an estimated 25 per cent reduction in the rates for credit insurance, which is required to insure small loans are repaid if something happens to the borrower.

A loophole in the new law, however, could enable some companies to keep charging the higher premium rates for an extended period of time.

Although officials of a number of large insurance companies indicated at the time the new law was passed that they had no intention of using that loophole, Buxton said his office has been notified that some firms "are currently soliciting new credit insurance contracts with the promise to write the business at the former exorbitant rates."

Should his office's investigations substantiate any efforts to circumvent the new law, Buxton said the companies involved would be subjected to sanctions from his division.

The new law, which makes Missouri the 46th state to regulate credit insurance premiums, is expected to save consumers an estimated $7.5 million a year in insurance charges.

Retirement in Maine to be by choice

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Retirement, with its gold watch and pat on the back, soon will be a choice rather than a requirement for all Maine public employes. They will be able to stay on the job as long as they are capable of working.

The state legislature, overriding the veto of Gov. James B. Longley, on Monday approved a bill prohibiting the mandatory retirement of all public employes. One 76-year-old supporter termed the measure a "bill of rights for the elderly."

The new law, believed to be the most comprehensive of its kind in the nation, goes into effect next July 1 and will affect state, county and municipal employes, including teachers.

Many public workers in Maine must now retire by age 65 or 70, while law enforcement officers and others in high-risk jobs face earlier retirement ages.

The measure also calls for a state-sponsored study over the next year to determine if the retirement age ban should be extended to private employers. A decision on the extension will rest with the 1979 legislature.

Longley had vetoed the bill, saying he was not convinced that it helps the elderly more than hurts them. The governor, a former insurance executive, also questioned whether the plan jeopardizes pension plans or decreases job opportunities for the young.

Retirement should be a voluntary decision, supporters maintained. They said it is unjust to push out a person, willing to and capable of work, because he or she reaches an arbitrarily chosen age.

BOOK REVIEW

ACADEMIA NUTS. By Charles R. Larson. Bobbs-Merrill. 177 Pages. $7.95.

Those who wincingly remember sitting trapped in a seminar as a pedantic professor of literature droned on unseemly long about, say, the symbolism of keys in James Joyce's "Ulysses" will read this book with joy.

But, then, so will non-English majors. For this is a very funny book and an extensive knowledge of the literary classics isn't needed to enjoy it, although some familiarity with the books discussed helps the jokes along.

The heroine of the collection of episodes gathered in "Academia Nuts" is Clara LePage, a young college student with a questioning mind who prefers to interpret books her way and not the professor's way. At first a business student taking a literature course to fill out her program, Clara gradually shifts over to full-time lit student. The courses she takes are taught by a professor named Edgar, who tries to hold the critical line but is driven into confused retreat time after time as Clara relentlessly puts forth her own version of what the classics are really about. To her, Lady Macbeth's handwashing scene is not one of guilt but, rather, indicates the Lady had a skin infection and was rubbing her hands together to relieve the itch. Nor, according to Clara, does Lady Macbeth die at the end of the play. In reality she has run off with the doctor who has told Macbeth that his wife is dead.

The way Clara reads "Crime and Punishment," Raskolnikov murdered no one, he imagined he did because he wanted to feel guilty. One of her wildest, and funniest, soarings of the imagination concerns the real reasons why Huck and Jim ran away in "Huckleberry Finn."

Amusing as this book is it shouldn't be read at one sitting, but rather dipped into over a period of days. If not, Clara's various savagings of the literary classics tends to cloy.

FALCONER. By John Cheever. Knopf. 211 Pages. $7.95.

The creative wheels of John Cheever grind exceedingly slow. "Bullet Park," his last novel and only his third, was published in 1969. There was only a book of short stories, "The World Of Apples," after that. It appeared in 1973. So, long-awaited is a rather modest but appropriate enough way of greeting Cheever's new novel, "Falconer."

The wait was worth it. Cheever is one of the few very good writers working in his country at this time. He does not fail in "Falconer," spinning out the strong tight sentences that contain more feeling in their few words than many lesser writers are able to convey in several pages.

Falconer is a prison. One of the men "brought to this old iron place on the late summer's day" is Farragut. "My name is Ezekiel Farragut and I was christened at the age of six months. If proof is needed, my wife has a photograph of me taken, not the day, I think, but soon after. I am wearing a long lace gown that must have some history. My head is hairless and protuberant and looks like a darning egg. I am smiling."

But Farragut is 48 now and the time for smiling is past. He is a prisoner "sitting on the edge of his bunk in a prison to which he had been unjustly confined for the murder of his brother." This novel is the moving story of Farragut's days in prison, a place where time has little meaning and the mind is free to roam through past and present and future. A place where imaginings blend with facts and the two in turn blend into a most absorbing narrative tapestry in which everything there is to know about Farragut is held up to the light for the reader's dazzlement.

After reading "Falconer," it is to be hoped Cheever does not take so long before publishing another book.

Iowa firm claims new process extends oil life

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (AP) –The president of a small design firm says it has invented a device that could save the nation millions of gallons of refined oil by extending the useful life of fluids 300 per cent.

Garth Huffman, president of Internationl Design and Development of Cedar Falls, says process is essentially a simple one.

Lines carrying the fluid are equipped with a venturi tube which makes the liquid move faster. The accelerated fluid strikes a barrier which, Huffman says, breaks down particles being carried by the fluid.

Huffman says the the device will allow auto engines to go three times as long between changes as they now can.

He estimates there are at least 200 million internal combustion engines in the United States and that if each could get by with an oil change one-third as often as now recommended, four billion quarts of refined oil per year could be saved.

Huffman says there are applications beyond extending the useful life of engine oil. He claims it will allow sewage plants to work more efficiently.

"The discovery will make many overloaded sanitation plants adequate for much longer periods of time because they will be able to handle much higher volumes of solid wastes much faster," he said in a letter explaining the device.

"Inasmuch as our discovery is usable wherever fluids are used, we are able to accelerate the process of milk homogenization (and) the mixing of paints and other liquids.

"It enables us in the chemical field not only to get better mixes on the chemicals, but to virtually eliminate plugged nozzles where applicators usually cause great difficulty, such as field applicators," he wrote.

Huffman, the majority stockholder in International Design and Development and its engineering arm, Can-Am Engineering Corp., was in Washington Monday and Tuesday.

Sagan Novel A Harmless Trifle

LOST PROFILE. By Francoise Sagan. Delacorte. 179 Pages. $6.95.

To say anything nasty about this book would be like dropping a brick on a French pastry. An ungraciously tough assault on a harmless trifle. In fact, if it didn't come with the Francoise Sagan cachet no one would think of saying anything at all about it. Let's settle for a measure of faint praise which stops just short of damning.

It's pleasant enough as far as it goes, women's magazine stuff really (pre-Women's Lib, that is), romance with a background of wealth, Parisian chic and no disturbing nonsense about kitchen sinks, pollution or economic crises. The narrator is an "innocent" heroine, with surprisingly little savoir faire considering her milieu, who's never worried her pretty head much about the struggle for identity, independence or moral integrity — although complications in her life appear and it looks briefly as if she's going to have to. But then there's a happy ending — for her. The "villain" just drops dead. Well.

The book might do for a quick half hour's distraction on a train journey. Better still, for those who read French it would be an undemanding exercise in the original version, an occasion to keep au courant with the language.

Fire damages market

A fire at 4:40 p.m. Monday at Ramey's Super Market on Route U in New Madrid caused considerable smoke and water damage, but firemen were able to contain the blaze to the rear part of the building. The fire apparently started at or near an incinerator, at far right, and had been burning for some time before it was detected. After extinquishing the blaze, firemen, at left, prepare to enter the smoke-filled area to investigate for further trouble spots. The store has been closed for repairs and cleanup operations.

CBS plans sweepstakes to publicize new series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The old saying, "You couldn't pay me to watch that show," may get the acid test next fall. CBS, to help publicize its new series, will run a $250,000 sweepstakes for viewers then.

"It's designed to get 'em to at least sample the shows," says Louis Dorfsman, the veteran CBS advertising chief who hatched the campaign. "If they get hooked, that's marvelous."

The campaign, costing CBS more than a million, kicks off at the start of the 1977-78 campaign with an 11-page advertisement in the Sept. 17 edition of TV Guide magazine.

In addition to touting the 10 new series on CBS' fall schedule, the ad includes a card viewers are asked to fill out and mail to CBS to be eligible to win cash, goods or both.

The last day for card-mailing is Oct. 21. The winners — no individual can win more than $25,000 — will be announced on Nov. 21.

"What we're doing is asking the reader to watch at least five of the new shows and answer some simple questions we pose about them," said Dorfsman. He was asked for a sample.

"Oh, tough ones," he said in jest. "Like who plays the lead on 'The Betty White Show'?" Othernquestions will ask viewers what they like about various stars and various new shows, he added.

Must viewers actually observe the offerings to be eligible?

"That's an iffy question," Dorfsman said. "But there's no arm-twisting. What we say is, 'We would like you to watch.' However, they theoretically can send the cards in without watching the shows."

When Dorfsman first unveiled his sweepstakes campaign to CBS affiliates last June, he noted that campaigns similar to it had been run the last 18 months by a number of package goods advertisers.

In those efforts, viewers were aked to watch specific commercials on specific shows, he said, and it resulted in a 17 per cent average rise in ratings for all the programs in which the ads appeared.

And, in a phone chat from New York, he made no bones about CBS' campaign seeking to raise ratings as well as publicize new shows.

If the advertisers' works caused a 17 per cent ratings hike, he said, "I don't know why I couldn't figure on a 25 per cent increase. I think people would rather watch shows than commercials."

Dorfsman, who expects three million to five million viewers to answer CBS' question cards, said it's the first time he can recall that any television network ever tried a campaign such as his.

Old laws to get new look; state plans trucking study

By GARY HARDEE
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — It is "high time" the Missouri Public Service Commission (PSC) took a comprehensive look at the state's regulation of the transportation industry, PSC Chairman James Mulvaney believes. After all, there are still laws governing trolley cars and requiring truck drivers to be "of good moral character."

But George Vitt, president of the Missouri Bus and Truck Association, does not share Mulvaney's enthusiasm for a comprehensive study.

"I'm not saying I'm against it (the study), but I would like to know where they're going. What's the ultimate end of the study? I certainly don't know," Vitt says.

Mulvaney recently announced the study, which will be conducted in two phases, by the University of Missouri-Columbia. The first phase, to be completed in June 1978, will be a comprehensive "look at the whole doggone scope of what we are doing," Mulvaney says.

"The Missouri bus and truck law has been on the books since 1930. We need to take a look at the whole industry and see if what we are doing is right and if we need to change," the chairman says.

Vitt does not see any problems that a study can solve.

"I don't know what the object of this study is. I haven't spoken with them (commissioners), but regulation is no problem whatsoever. Regulation is a necessary part of life," Vitt says.

"We've got to be regulated to protect people," Vitt, who works for Orscheln Bros. Truck Lines Inc., adds. "Our biggest problem is people hauling illegally, without authority. But they (the PSC) don't have the people to police this."

Vitt believes the commission should be concerned first with stopping the unauthorized hauling rather than study the state's present laws governing truckers.

"Missouri's regulation (of truckers) is superior as far as most states go," Vitt says.

But George Fox, head of the PSC's transportation division, believes the study can help close loopholes in the state's regulations.

Fox says the PSC, which sets rates for general classes of freight, household goods and dump truck hauling, depends too heavily upon the trucking industry for information to determine fair rates.

Carrier companies are required to file traffic and annual business reports with the PSC, from which the commission determines rates.

"I hope the study can help us develop procedures to check whether these traffic studies used in rate hearings are truly representative of what the truckers are hauling," Fox says. "We depend pretty much on what the carriers tell us, and we have some reason to doubt whether some of the information is representative."

Fox also hopes the study can determine ways to ease the paper work load on smaller transportation companies.

Iowa firm claims new process extends oil life

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (AP) –The presidentof a small design firm says it has invented a device that could save the nation millions of gallons of refined oil by extending the useful life of fluids 300 per cent.

Garth Huffman, president of Internationl Design and Development of Cedar Falls, says process is essentially a simple one.

Lines carrying the fluid are equipped with a venturi tube which makes the liquid move faster. The accelerated fluid strikes a barrier which, Huffman says, breaks down particles being carried by the fluid.

Huffman says the the device will allow auto engines to go three times as long between changes as they now can.

He estimates there are at least 200 million internal combustion engines in the United States and that if each could get by with an oil change one-third as often as now recommended, four billion quarts of refined oil per year could be saved.

Huffman says there are applications beyond extending the useful life of engine oil. He claims it will allow sewage plants to work more efficiently.

"The discovery will make many overloaded sanitation plants adequate for much longer periods of time because they will be able to handle much higher volumes of solid wastes much faster," he said in a letter explaining the device.

"Inasmuch as our discovery is usable wherever fluids are used, we are able to accelerate the process of milk homogenization (and) the mixing of paints and other liquids.

"It enables us in the chemical field not only to get better mixes on the chemicals, but to virtually eliminate plugged nozzles where applicators usually cause great difficulty, such as field applicators," he wrote.

Huffman, the majority stockholder in International Design and Development and its engineering arm, Can-Am Engineering Corp., was in Washington Monday and Tuesday.

Today in U.S. history

Today is Wednesday, July 27, the 208th day of 1977. There are 157 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1953, an armistice was signed at Panmunjom, ending the Korean War after more than three years of fighting.

On this date —

In 1789, the U.S. Congress established the forerunner of the State Department, the Department of Foreign Affairs.

In 1922, the United States formally recognized the countries of Albania, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

In 1941, during World War II, Japanese forces landed in French Indochina.

In 1954, Britain and Egypt agreed on terms ending British control of the Suez Canal.

In 1955, Austria regained sovereignty after 17 years of occupation by foreign troops.

In 1960, a Republican National Convention in Chicago nominated Richard M. Nixon for president.

Ten years ago: President Charles de Gaulle returned to France after causing a big stir in Canada by espousing indpendence for Quebec and canceling a meeting with Prime Minister Lester Pearson.

Five years ago: Britain sent 4,000 more troops to Northern Ireland to oppose the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

One year ago: A powerful earthquake shook a wide area in Northern China, including the capital of Peking. The extent of damage and casualties was not disclosed.

Today's birthdays: Former big league baseball manager Leo Durocher is 71. Former World Bank President George Woods is 76.

Thought for today: Fishing is the chance to wash one's soul with pure air. It brings meekness and inspiration, reduces our egotism.

Today in U.S. history

Today is Wednesday, July 27, the 208th day of 1977. There are 157 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1953, an armistice was signed at Panmunjom, ending the Korean War after more than three years of fighting.

On this date —

In 1789, the U.S. Congress established the forerunner of the State Department, the Department of Foreign Affairs.

In 1922, the United States formally recognized the countries of Albania, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

In 1941, during World War II, Japanese forces landed in French Indochina.

In 1954, Britain and Egypt agreed on terms ending British control of the Suez Canal.

In 1955, Austria regained sovereignty after 17 years of occupation by foreign troops.

In 1960, a Republican National Convention in Chicago nominated Richard M. Nixon for president.

Ten years ago: President Charles de Gaulle returned to France after causing a big stir in Canada by espousing indpendence for Quebec and canceling a meeting with Prime Minister Lester Pearson.

Five years ago: Britain sent 4,000 more troops to Northern Ireland to oppose the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

One year ago: A powerful earthquake shook a wide area in Northern China, including the capital of Peking. The extent of damage and casualties was not disclosed.

Today's birthdays: Former big league baseball manager Leo Durocher is 71. Former World Bank President George Woods is 76.

Thought for today: Fishing is the chance to wash one's soul with pure air. It brings meekness and inspiration, reduces our egotism.

Missouri towns borrow names from odd places

Visit Paris, Pocahontas, Philadelphia and Peculiar and never leave the state

By SUE A. MERKNER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Do you dream about a romantic trip to Rome, Paris, Vienna, Mexico, Japan, Athens or Amsterdam? But do thoughts of lost luggage, bad food and expensive air fares keep you home?

Well, pack your bags and get ready to go, because all those destinations and many others are only a day or two drive from wherever you are in Missouri.

The State of Missouri has an abundance of city and town names "borrowed" from other places. From Adair to Zaima, from populations of four to more than 600,000, Missouri's towns offer a wide variety of names.

A visit to Cairo, Carthage, Cuba, Lebanon, Lisbon and Milan can be yours simply by driving the state's winding, rolling roads.

Besides foreign countries, you can easily visit such places as California, Florida, Louisiana, Nevada and Oregon without even crossing the state line. Side trips to the Yukon and the Pacific also are within easy reach.

What do Austin, Houston, Laredo, Odessa and Waco have in common? Besides being well-known Texas cities, they also are found in Missouri.

Other famous cities from around the U. S. found in Missouri are: Atlanta, Macon, Miami and Nashville from the South; Cleveland, Philadelphia and Syracuse from the East; and Berkeley, Beverly Hills, Pasadena Hills, Denver, Portland and Santa Fe from the West.

If famous places bore you, perhaps famous persons are more interesting. Napoleon, Plato and Pocahontas come together as an unlikely group within the state borders. As in many states, former U. S. Presidents have not been forgotten — such as Washington, Van Buren, and of course the City of Jefferson.

A little help from above can never hurt, and Missouri has a plethora of saints to implore for help. Saints Ann, Anthony, Catharine, Charles, Elizabeth, Genevieve, George, James, John, Joseph, Louis, Martin, Mary, Patrick, Peter, Robert and Thomas all have cities named in their honor.

The "just plain folks" have not been forgotten either. It seems that there is an equal number of women's and men's names — at least there is no chauvinism in naming towns. Perhaps instead of looking in a telephone book for a new baby's name, a young couple might try the Missouri map.

A variety of names are theirs for the choosing. There is Beulah, Beverly, Dawn, Dora, Emma, Eunice, Jane, Shirley, Stella, Tina and Victoria, Mo. There also is Clarence, Clark, Craig, Edwards, Elmer, Eugene, Festus, Otto, Warren, Willard and Winthrop, Mo.

Green seems to win the popularity vote for state color. There are 10 towns named after the color: Greenbrier, Greencastle, Greendale, Greenfield, Green Ridge, Greensburg, Greentop, Greenville, Greenwood, and simply, Green City.

Although the state tree officially is the flowering dogwood, the oak seems to be much more popular for town names. There is Oak Grove, Oak Hill, Oakland, Oakland Park, Oak Ridge, Oaks, Oakview, Oakwood, Oakwood Manor and Oakwood Park, five of which are near Kansas City.

Missouri's Indian heritage is remembered in the names of Arrow Rock, Bearcreek, Kewanee and Lake Waukomis.

Some names seem to have a military ring to them, such as March, Regal, Duke, Gentry, King City and Queen City. Others deal with lofty ideals such as Liberty, Charity and Reform.

Many names seem to have arisen out of the Puritan work ethic, inspiring people to Advance to Success in Commerce, through the use of Fair Play, Fairdealing and Competition. Eventually someone will become Boss of the Agency or Branch.

However, if he becomes unemployed, he may try to Gladden himself by drinking Bourbon on the Couch until he becomes a Sleeper. But when the mailman brings his Aid check, he will discover some Rocky Comfort in unemployment.

There is a four-way tie for the town with the shortest name. Aid, Bay, Bem and Rea have a combined population of 189 persons. The city with the longest name is the St. Louis suburb or Bellefontaine Neighbors, with a population of 14,084.

Sikestonians visit Capitol

Nadine and Walter Stalling of Sikeston visited recently with U. S. Rep. Bill D. Burlison at the Capitol in Washington, D., C. With them were Bernita and Cecil Stegall and Margo Cowan of Las Cruces, New Mex. From left, are: Margo Cowan, the Stallingses, Burlison and the Stegalls. They also visited Jamestown, Yorktown, Fredericksburg, Washington D. C. and Philadelphia.

Juanita Barber heads Essex MHA drive

Juanita Barber is Chairperson for the Mental Health Association campaign in Essex.

As campaign Chairman, she will organize Bellringer volunteers to go house-to-house during September, Mental Health Month, in Essex.

All proceeds from the campaign will benefit the Mental Health Association in Missouri, a voluntary citizens' organization not state or federally funded.

The Mental Health Association is a nationwide organization dedicated to improving and expanding care and treatment for the mentally ill and handicapped. Research into the causes of mental illness is only one of the volunteer support activities. Unpaid volunteers provide help to patients in hospitals, and carry out extensive public education programs.

"Mental illness affects one out of ten people." In Missouri, then, over 490,000 people will need services for mental or emotional problems at some point in their lives.

One of the primary goals of the Mental Health Association is to see that people are served in their own community, when they need help.

The Association must rely on public support to accomplish its goals since it receives no government funding.

Claims 'watchdogs' speak only for themselves

Pollster: Naderites betray public

By Tom Tiede

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Almost from the day Ralph Nader popularized consumer advocacy a decade ago, the activism has been condemned by corporate captains. Now, however, such criticism is spreading. Consumers themselves are increasingly questioning both the worth and the goals of the consumer protection movement.

Some of the worry is related to the sheer power the activists have acquired. Nader alone is responsible for many new federal laws, from auto safety to the Wholesale Meat Act. Often the laws — such as the regulation requiring seat belts — have been unpopular with and costly for the very people they were designed to assist.

Also, there is criticism of the single mindedness of consumer advocates. When citizen groups lobbied for unit pricing labels on supermarket goods a few years ago, they were shown clearly that the labeling would be so confusing as to be worthless. They insisted anyway. Today unit price labels are understood by practically no one.

But the chief rap against the Nader-type forces is that they are arrogant to assume that they speak for the "public interest." What is the public interest? Who really speaks for the consumer, black, white, young, old, rich, poor? The emerging idea is that only the consumer speaks for the consumer, and in a legion of voices.

Championing this idea is psychologist Joe Smith, 47. He is president of Oxtoby-Smith, Inc., consumer survey specialists since Ralph Nader was a pup. Smith's pollsters have tapped the public mind on attitudes ranging from offshore oil to the frustrations of air travel "and I've learned one thing: the public usually arrives at sound decisions."

At times, the consumer decisions may parallel the thoughts of consumer activists. When TWA worried about slow air business a few years ago, its officers considered installing new frills to lure passengers; after surveying passengers, however, Smith found that ordinary onboard luggage service — a Naderite solution — was far more necessary.

Other times the consumer surveys are at loggerheads with activist philosophy. Smith tells of an extensive opinion sampling that indicates East Coast residents favor offshore oil exploration. Smith says those polled have many arguments with the oil industry, especially as regards gouging, but 70 per cent vote for offshore drilling anyway.

This positive offshore oil attitude is, of course, precisely opposite to what consumer advocates believe is the case. Smith says this is because the advocates are either misinformed, or fudging. More likely it is the former. Smith says many advocates spend too much of their time looking at their own belly buttons:

"I don't want to knock Ralph Nader, or people like him. I think they have done great things. But they sometimes fall victim to the same kind of irrationality they condemn in the business world. They replace reason with passion. And since they are all tuned in to the same antenna, they feel they are right irrespective of the facts."

Smith adds that it's not that Naderites are malicious or insincere, but that they are too often wrong. Besides this, Smith says they have become burdened with vested interests. For example, it would have been wise for advocates to admit the mistake of unit pricing labels, "but they felt their credibility was riding on the issue."

ACCORDING TO SMITH, it's not that Naderites are malicious or insincere. Simply, they are too often wrong because they are burdened with a vested interest in proving their own credibility.

Given a stubborn industrial position, then, and an equally stubborn one by monopolistic consumer advocates, Smith says everybody loses. He believes this kind of adversary system produces little else save lies, intimidation and eventually chaos. The notion of consumer protection is lost in the fight over power and influence.

According to Smith, the better way would be for both sides to go to the consumers directly. Through polls and surveys, Smith insists people are perfectly capable of weighing problems and determining solutions. Indeed, he says, having become suspicious of consumer advocates, many consumers want more and more to speak for themselves.

For their part, the consumer activists have their own suspicions about attitude surveys. Smith is regularly accused of being merely a hired gun. Regarding the offshore oil poll, for one thing, the Nader forces sneer that it was paid for by the American Petroleum Institute, so it could be expected to be favorable to the industry.

Does Smith manipulate his polls? He swears not. "The best way I can serve an employer it to tell him exactly what the consumers are thinking; otherwise, in the long run I've screwed him." What's more, Smith adds, polling is competitive, "so if my results are far out of line with other results, my business is dead."

Medicine for gout

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing to you in regards to Zyloprim, used to treat gout. Would you comment on the side effects of this drug and what it actually does for the body? In addition, does taking it a prolonged time have any harmful effect? A friend of mine has been on this medicine for eight years. His physician states the gout crystals take a long time to form and therefore a long time to disappear.

DEAR READER — Zyloprim is the trade name for allopurinol. Gout, gouty arthritis and kidney stones caused by gout (not other types of kidney stones) are all caused by an overproduction of uric acid by your own body cells.

By decreasing an individual's tendency to form excessive amounts of uric acid, the kidneys are often able to gradually clear and keep the body cleared of uric acid salts. This prevents acute gout attacks and gouty arthritis. I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-3, (Gout, Uric Acid) to give you a more complete discussion of gout. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Zyloprim is not used to relieve the acute attack of gout. It is used after the acute attack is over to prevent another one. I am happy to say it is a fairly safe medicine. Almost all medicines do have some side effects. I don't know a single one that doesn't. Zyloprim may cause a skin rash and if it does the doctor must be seen at once. Rarely it causes digestive upsets. Doctors like to monitor the blood count to be sure there is no adverse response there. Everyone on this medicine needs good supervision but they should get that anyway because of the gout. I'm sure that since your friend has been taking this medicine eight years, apparently without trouble, that he is not likely to have any difficulties with it.

If he stops taking the medicine his body cells will start producing excess uric acid again in about two weeks and eventually he will be exposing himself to the complications of gout.

4-H'ers Try 'Incredible Milk' Recipes

CHICAGO—For a Sunday brunch treat, try cottage cheese pancakes (see recipe below). They're one of many delicious, easy-to-prepare dairy recipes in "Incredible Milk," a new publication for younger 4-H members.

Produced by Carnation Company for 4-H, "Incredible Milk" also contains cooking lessons and food science experiments, plus information on nutrition and different types of dairy foods and products. It includes tips on giving a dairy foods demonstration and introduces 4-H'ers to careers in the dairy industry.

Contents are geared to 9- to 12-year-olds in the national 4-H dairy foods program conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service and supported by Carnation. The program emphasizes dairy foods preparation, science, nutrition and careers.

4-H'ers 9-19 can take part in a variety of practical dairy foods projects and activities that are fun as well as educational. And they can earn awards at each level of participation.

Recognition includes six $1,000 scholarships at the national level, expense-paid trips to National 4-H Congress in Chicago to one 4-H'er per state, and up to four medals of honor in each county. Awards are arranged by National 4-H Council, and winners are chosen by the Extension Service.

National winners will be announced at the 56th National 4-H Congress Nov. 27-Dec. 1. More information on the program is available from county extension agents.

Drop pancake mixture by the 1/4-cupful onto the hot griddle or skillet. Cook until undersides of the pancakes are brown (edges will be firm and batter will have started to bubble). Turn pancakes over and cook until the other sides are browned. Serve with your favorite topping. Makes 10 pancakes.

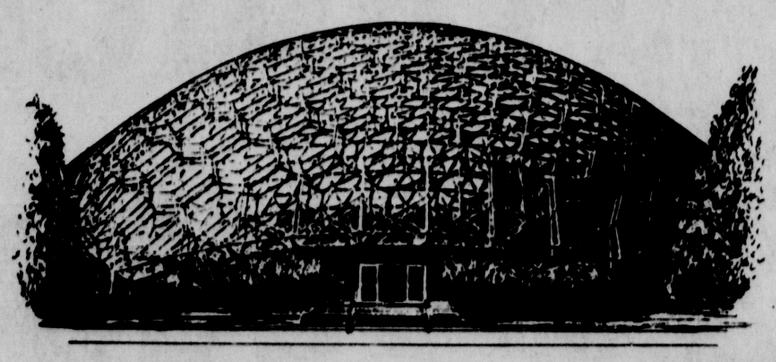
INDOOR RAIN FOREST



Inside the Climatron at the Missouri Botanical Garden, a tropical rain forest flourishes year-round. The garden covers more than 70 acres in the heart of St. Louis, but the Climatron, the world's first geodesic dome greenhouse, is its undisputed chief attraction. Other display houses, a Japanese Garden and special events also draw visitors to one of the world's most famous botanical gardens. The green, parklike setting is a perfect complement to the night life, shopping, sports and other attractions of metropolitan St. Louis.

Juanita Barber heads Essex MHA drive

Juanita Barber is Chairperson for the Mental Health Association campaign in Essex.

As campaign Chairman, she will organize Bellringer volunteers to go house-to-house during September, Mental Health Month, in Essex.

All proceeds from the campaign will benefit the Mental Health Association in Missouri, a voluntary citizens' organization not state or federally funded.

The Mental Health Association is a nationwide organization dedicated to improving and expanding care and treatment for the mentally ill and handicapped. Research into the causes of mental illness is only one of the volunteer support activities. Unpaid volunteers provide help to patients in hospitals, and carry out extensive public education programs.

"Mental illness affects one out of ten people." In Missouri, then, over 490,000 people will need services for mental or emotional problems at some point in their lives.

One of the primary goals of the Mental Health Association is to see that people are served in their own community, when they need help.

The Association must rely on public support to accomplish its goals since it receives no government funding.

Claims 'watchdogs' speak only for themselves

Pollster: Naderites betray public

By Tom Tiede

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Almost from the day Ralph Nader popularized consumer advocacy a decade ago, the activism has been condemned by corporate captains. Now, however, such criticism is spreading. Consumers themselves are increasingly questioning both the worth and the goals of the consumer protection movement.

Some of the worry is related to the sheer power the activists have acquired. Nader alone is responsible for many new federal laws, from auto safety to the Wholesale Meat Act. Often the laws — such as the regulation requiring seat belts — have been unpopular with and costly for the very people they were designed to assist.

Also, there is criticism of the single mindedness of consumer advocates. When citizen groups lobbied for unit pricing labels on supermarket goods a few years ago, they were shown clearly that the labeling would be so confusing as to be worthless. They insisted anyway. Today unit price labels are understood by practically no one.

But the chief rap against the Nader-type forces is that they are arrogant to assume that they speak for the "public interest." What is the public interest? Who really speaks for the consumer, black, white, young, old, rich, poor? The emerging idea is that only the consumer speaks for the consumer, and in a legion of voices.

Championing this idea is psychologist Joe Smith, 47. He is president of Oxtoby-Smith, Inc., consumer survey specialists since Ralph Nader was a pup. Smith's pollsters have tapped the public mind on attitudes ranging from offshore oil to the frustrations of air travel "and I've learned one thing: the public usually arrives at sound decisions."

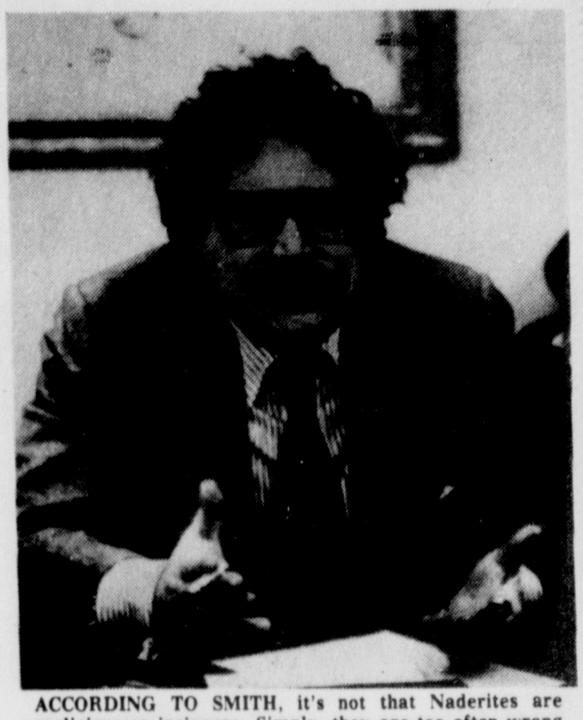
At times, the consumer decisions may parallel the thoughts of consumer activists. When TWA worried about slow air business a few years ago, its officers considered installing new frills to lure passengers; after surveying passengers, however, Smith found that ordinary onboard luggage service — a Naderite solution — was far more necessary.

Other times the consumer surveys are at loggerheads with activist philosophy. Smith tells of an extensive opinion sampling that indicates East Coast residents favor offshore oil exploration. Smith says those polled have many arguments with the oil industry, especially as regards gouging, but 70 per cent vote for offshore drilling anyway.

This positive offshore oil attitude is, of course, precisely opposite to what consumer advocates believe is the case. Smith says this is because the advocates are either misinformed, or fudging. More likely it is the former. Smith says many advocates spend too much of their time looking at their own belly buttons:

"I don't want to knock Ralph Nader, or people like him. I think they have done great things. But they sometimes fall victim to the same kind of irrationality they condemn in the business world. They replace reason with passion. And since they are all tuned in to the same antenna, they feel they are right irrespective of the facts."

Smith adds that it's not that Naderites are malicious or insincere, but that they are too often wrong. Besides this, Smith says they have become burdened with vested interests. For example, it would have been wise for advocates to admit the mistake of unit pricing labels, "but they felt their credibility was riding on the issue."



ACCORDING TO SMITH, it's not that Naderites are malicious or insincere. Simply, they are too often wrong because they are burdened with a vested interest in proving their own credibility.

Given a stubborn industrial position, then, and an equally stubborn one by monopolistic consumer advocates, Smith says everybody loses. He believes this kind of adversary system produces little else save lies, intimidation and eventually chaos. The notion of consumer protection is lost in the fight over power and influence.

According to Smith, the better way would be for both sides to go to the consumers directly. Through polls and surveys, Smith insists people are perfectly capable of weighing problems and determining solutions. Indeed, he says, having become suspicious of consumer advocates, many consumers want more and more to speak for themselves.

For their part, the consumer activists have their own suspicions about attitude surveys. Smith is regularly accused of being merely a hired gun. Regarding the offshore oil poll, for one thing, the Nader forces sneer that it was paid for by the American Petroleum Institute, so it could be expected to be favorable to the industry.

Does Smith manipulate his polls? He swears not. "The best way I can serve an employer it to tell him exactly what the consumers are thinking; otherwise, in the long run I've screwed him." What's more, Smith adds, polling is competitive, "so if my results are far out of line with other results, my business is dead."

Medicine for gout

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing to you in regards to Zyloprim, used to treat gout. Would you comment on the side effects of this drug and what it actually does for the body? In addition, does taking it a prolonged time have any harmful effect? A friend of mine has been on this medicine for eight years. His physician states the gout crystals take a long time to form and therefore a long time to disappear.

DEAR READER — Zyloprim is the trade name for allopurinol. Gout, gouty arthritis and kidney stones caused by gout (not other types of kidney stones) are all caused by an overproduction of uric acid by your own body cells.

By decreasing an individual's tendency to form excessive amounts of uric acid, the kidneys are often able to gradually clear and keep the body cleared of uric acid salts. This prevents acute gout attacks and gouty arthritis. I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-3, (Gout, Uric Acid) to give you a more complete discussion of gout. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Zyloprim is not used to relieve the acute attack of gout. It is used after the acute attack is over to prevent another one. I am happy to say it is a fairly safe medicine. Almost all medicines do have some side effects. I don't know a single one that doesn't. Zyloprim may cause a skin rash and if it does the doctor must be seen at once. Rarely it causes digestive upsets. Doctors like to monitor the blood count to be sure there is no adverse response there. Everyone on this medicine needs good supervision but they should get that anyway because of the gout. I'm sure that since your friend has been taking this medicine eight years, apparently without trouble, that he is not likely to have any difficulties with it.

If he stops taking the medicine his body cells will start producing excess uric acid again in about two weeks and eventually he will be exposing himself to the complications of gout.

Legal aliens shunned by U.S.

By Tom Tiede

EDINBURG, Texas — (NEA) — Luis Miguel Castillo, age 53 but looking older, claims he is an alien in his own country.

And apparently there are thousands like him.

Castillo was born near Houston at a time when birth certificates were mostly an Anglo tradition. His parents did record his residence through church baptism, but the papers, if there were papers, were destroyed in a fire. That fire also took the life of Castillo's mother. His father died later in a road accident.

In 1951, as he tells it, Castillo visted Mexico for the first time, to attend the marriage of a friend. When he tried to come back into the United States he could offer no proof of citizenship and was therefore denied entrance. What to do? Naturally he swam the Rio Grande and now lives near Laredo as an "illegal alien."

If Castillo's story is true, he is of course not an "illegal alien," but more properly a "legal illegal alien." He says he was born here whether or not the government believes it, therefore rather than live in Mexico (where incidentally he is also not a citizen) he is forced to live in his homeland as an official intruder.

No one can say with certainty how many people of Mexican extraction share space with Luis Castillo in these circumstances. But a leading American immigration attorney, Laurier McDonald, says the number is high; he believes 10 per cent of the millions of illegal aliens in the United States have a legitimate, if unrecognized, right to be here.

McDonald's guess is probably as good as anyone's. A former FBI agent, he now runs one of the largest legal assistance centers for immigrants in the nation. One hundred aliens a day visit the law office for help; many are frauds and phonies, the attorney admits, but there is another, and less known, side of the picture.

That side is a melancholy one. McDonald says a man such as Luis Castillo may have a wife in the states, and a family as well. But though immigration laws are established expressly to unify families, they often serve instead to keep families apart, "and so it shouldn't surprise us that a man may just sneak across the border."

McDonald blames U.S. authorities for much of the problem. He says officers of the Immigration and Naturalization Service are often "callous and incompetent" in the handling of aliens. He says many have the attitude that since some Mexicans lie, all Mexicans are liars, hence should be treated with brevity and suspicion.

McDonald cites the case of Amalia Rivas as an example:

She is a Mexican resident who, in 1950, gave birth to a son in America. That lad later joined the U.S. Army and was killed while trying to rescue a comrade in Vietnam. Mrs. Rivas would now like to come to America to work, but when she applied for permission at the U.S. Consul in Monterrey she says she was told: "Not no, but hell no!"

McDonald insists that Mrs. Rivas has a right to be in this country. He points out that had her American son lived to age 21, he could have used his status to help bring her here. But McDonald says "government bumblers" can't understand this and so the woman has struggled for years to try to get them to change their minds.

Eventually, the government minds might change. But when? McDonald says the Rivas application is only one of "a huge mountain of appeals" piled unattended in the INS bureaucracy. Immigration authorities say there are at least 236,000 applications backlogged at present, some of which may not be completed before the year 1981.

To hurry the process, many legal illegals are compelled to hire attorneys such as McDonald. Those who can't afford his fees may go for help to Mexican noterios (noteries) who are little more than pocket picking shysters. In either case, McDonald finds it sad that people who belong here must go through such pains to prove it.

The alternative to the proof is a diminished life as a fugitive. Luis Castillo, for instance, says he has been rounded up in several illegal alien raids and returned to Mexico. On occasion he has had to pay transporters or bribe Mexican officials to get back to the North. Presently he owns forged I.D. papers in an assumed name.

Castillo says he has given up trying to prove his birthright. For one thing, he hasn't the money to hire legal muscle. For another, he knows that if he put his case to the INS himself, he would be stripped of his job (fieldhand) and sent off to Mexico until a decision was reached.

"I'm too old to wait so long," he says.

So it is with many of the nation's legal illegals. Frustrated and defeated, they decide that existence here as outlaws is better than no existence here at all. A shame, says attorney McDonald; these unfortunates so want America they are willing to accept its insults and its apathy, and that's a fair definition of good citizenship.

AMALIA RIVAS gave birth to a son in America in 1950. The youth later joined the army and was killed in Vietnam. Had he lived to be 21, he could have brought his mother to the United States. But now when she applied for a work permit the U.S. Consul told her "Hell no!"

Teasdale taps top aide for conservation post

KANSAS CITY (AP) — One of Gov. Joseph Teasdale's top behind-the-scenes advisors, Robert Aylward, was named to the state Conservation Commission today.

Aylward, vice president of Aylward Products Co. of Kansas City, will succeed Jim Tom Blair, whose term has expired. Teasdale announced both Aylward's appointment to the commission along with the appointment of J. Ernest Dunn Jr, also of Kansas City, to the four-member board at a news conference here.

Dunn, president of J. E. Dunn & Associates Inc., of Kansas City, succeeds Robert G. Delaney, whose term on the commission has also expired.

Both Aylward and Dunn will serve until June 30, 1983. Their appointments are subject to Senate confirmation.

Teasdale also signed five bills passed during the recent legislative session. Those measures call for the state to pay one-half of all county property assessment costs, the elimination of the 180-day limit on medical treatment under workmen's compensation, the revision of the number of preemptory challenges allowed in criminal trials, the authorization for a doctor or medical examiner under certain conditions to remove the pituitary gland of a person during an autopsy for research education or therapy and changes in the state's sheltered workshop law.

The governor also announced that the city of Kansas City will receive a $2 million grant for construction of a skills center and improvements to the Kansas City school system. The funds will come from federal money allotted to the state through the public works program.

Grants of $125,000 each will also be given to the cities of Harrisonville and Pleasant Hill, Teasdale said, for street improvement projects.

20 great years, thanks to you.

"In voting to deny some 300,000 women each year safe and legal abortions, Congress has consciously singled out the most oppressed women. The ban on abortion will hit hardest at blacks, Chicanas and Puerto Ricans — 38.5 per cent of whom rely on Medicaid for health care . . ."

Citizens confront bureaucratic indifference

Legal aliens shunned by U.S.

By Tom Tiede

EDINBURG, Texas — (NEA) — Luis Miguel Castillo, age 53 but looking older, claims he is an alien in his own country.

And apparently there are thousands like him.

Castillo was born near Houston at a time when birth certificates were mostly an Anglo tradition. His parents did record his residence through church baptism, but the papers, if there were papers, were destroyed in a fire. That fire also took the life of Castillo's mother. Survey declares Lincoln most attractive U.S. city

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The City of Lincoln, Neb., has been declared the most attractive of 100 American cities surveyed by the Center for Applied Urban Research of the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

The center selected 80 measurable things relating to a city's economic, demographic and social environment and applied them to 100 major cities.

The center concluded that considering all factors, Lincoln was the best.

Madison, Wis., ranked second, Des Moines, Iowa, third and Omaha came in fourth. Newark, N.J., came in last.

The center ranked the cities by two methods, the first weighted each of the 80 factors equally, while the second method divided the factors into four generally categories, then weighted each category equally. The four general categories were economic factors, demographic and environmental factors, crime factors and recreation and education factors.

By both methods, the top four and bottom, three rankings were the same. Other rankings varied.

Dr. Ralph Todd said his research intended to provide a yardstick with which to compare conditions in one city withthose in other cities. In doing that, he said, attitudes or opinions, subjective aspects that don't lend themselves to measurement, weren't used.

Instead, Dr. Todd and his researchers dealt with such things as per capita income, electricity rates, population density, divorces and numbers of books in a city's library.

It is Dr. Todd's contention that American cities have received a "bad press," and that the pessimism flowing from that has made it difficult to attract industry and people into metropolitan areas.

He is more optimistic, saying that "cities are today what they have always been — the centers of economic, social and cultural opportunity. They offer to the individual a wide variety of employment and educational opportunities, cultural and recreational diversity, police and fire protection and a wide selection of housing types and costs.

On the other hand, the study showed, eight of the 10 lowest ranked cities are concentrated along the Atlantic Coast in New Jersey, New York and Maryland and in the industrial states of Michigan and Ohio.

Dr. Todd said there doesn't seem to be a significant relationship between the population of the 100 cities and their ranking. While five of the 10 cities in the top 10 are under 250,000, four of the 10 lowest-ranked cities also had populations of less than 250,000.

There also doesn't seem to be a correlation between the year a city was founded and a city's over-all ranking, he said, although he noted it did appear that the older a city is the less economically well off it is, and the younger a city, the better its economy.

"All of these conditions contribute in varying degrees to the 'good life'. Industrial investors who demand lower costs, larger and more diversified labor pools, readily available utilities, transportation, vocational and other education programs, as well as medical and hospital facilities, would normally find the best condition in the cities. Admittedly, not all our cities are equally successful in meeting these needs of individuals and industry," he said.

For example, he said, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in 1973, had the highest per capita income ($5,485) of the 100 major cities, while San Antonio had the lowest ($2,892.)

Another example, he said is that in 1975 Lincoln had the least frequent number of robberies per 100,000 population (at 47), while Detroit had the highest with 1,597.

Dr. Todd found that five of the 10 cities with the highest composite scores are in the Great Plains region of Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Iowa. Five of the 10 are state capitals, and five had 1975 population of less than 250,000.

Beauty is in the eye of the beholder — especially on the beach.

If the Postal Service drops Saturday deliveries — how can we stand the suspense of waiting for the junk mail until Monday?

The grass is always greener on the other side of the fence, because your neighbor borrowed the last bag of lawn food.

The local bar is running on a strictly cash, pay-as-you-glow basis.

Montana senator eager to set record straight

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you yearn to see Sen. John Melcher devour a thick, juicy steak, now's a good time to arrange it.

The Montana Democrat is trying feverishly to correct an erroneous report that he's a vegetarian.

"I'm actually one of the best markets around for beef, pork, lamb, poultry, fish and other seafoods," says the senator.

Melcher's problem stems from a report in a monthly magazine published in the nation's capital that identified him as the only vegetarian in Congress. In fact, he's the only veterinarian.

Montana ranchers raise a lot of beef and were a little upset when word filtered back from Washington that the man they'd elected to the Senate last November didn't eat meat.

"Constituents are getting calls from out-of-state friends and relatives inquiring about my eating habits," said the harassed senator. "I started the morning with a call from a rancher in Belt, Mont., who had received a call from his daughter in Los Angeles."

Of course, like any good politician, Melcher doesn't want to alienate the vegetarian vote.

"I have nothing against vegetarians," he says. "I have sympathy for them because they are missing a lot of good protein and a lot of good eating."

And if you decide to show up at Melcher's office with a steak, he likes them rare.

Few members of Congress can resist waxing eloquent when comparing the quality of life in their home state with any other place on earth.

During a recent debate on a treaty to permit U.S. citizens convicted of crimes in Mexico to serve their terms in U.S. jails, Sen. John Tower had a few good words for the prisons in Texas.

"I have never spent any time in a Mexican jail myself," said Tower, "but I have friends who have, and they tell me they did not exactly relish the experience."

A few of the senator's friends have spent time in both Mexican and Texas jails and, he said, "they find the Texas jails far superior in terms of the cuisine, the quarters and all of the other accommodations that go along with it."

When senators resort to a filibuster in an effort to block action on a bill, they prefer to say they are engaged in extended debate or in an educational process. No one likes to admit they are filibustering. It's not considered a nice thing to do, even when you're doing it.

The Senate now is engaged in extended debate on a bill to extend public financing to senatorial campaigns.

Looking ahead to the battle of words, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, who favors cutting off debate on the bill, offered a new euphemism for a filibuster. It took the form of a prediction that the weather in the Senate chamber would consist of "variable winds ranging from mild to gusty with considerable fog."

When Congress debates changes in the tax laws, the rhetoric can get as confusing as a tax form.

For people looking for a simple guide to who's saying what about taxes, try these definitions Professor Gerard M. Brannon of Georgetown University offered to the Senate Finance Committee:

"The politics of taxation in the U.S. has been a war between the redistributors and the growth people.

"Redistributors think America will go to hell in a limousine unless we do things to stop the rich from getting richer while the poor get poorer.

"Growth people think that America will go to hell on foot unless we do things to increase the reward for thrift and initiative."

Most crops still short of water

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The hot dry weather of the past week has caused the condition of most crops over the state to decline except for west-central counties which had moisture reserves, the Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Monday.

Soil moisture supplies were reported at 69 per cent short and 31 per cent adequate, compared with 40 per cent short and 56 per cent adequate and four per cent surplus a week earlier.

Crops in the northeast portion of the state were suffering most from the drought damage although other northern, southwestern and southeastern counties are also becoming very dry, the service said. Crop damage from grasshoppers was reported in several northern counties.

The report said six days were suitable for field work during the week. About 65 per cent of the Missouri soybean crop was reported in good condition or better. Development was about two weeks ahead of last year and nine days ahead of normal. About 56 per cent of the soybeans were in the blooming stage or beyond and 21 per cent were setting pods, compared with 34 per cent blooming last year and a normal of 38 per cent blooming.

Corn conditions varied from poor to excellent with most of the poor corn in the northeast, the state service reported. About 90 per cent of the crop has silked two weeks ahead of last year's 59 per cent and well ahead of the normal of 62 per cent, and 40 per cent of the corn is in the dough stage, also two weeks ahead of 1976.

Grain sorghum is 61 per cent headed, compared with the 13 per cent last year by this date and well ahead of the 28 per cent normal.

The second cutting of alfalfa is 91 per cent complete, a few days ahead of last year. About 15 per cent of the third cutting of alfalfa is completed, about a week earlier than normal.

Cotton was mostly in good condition with 79 per cent of the crop setting bolls. This is about two weeks ahead of normal, and sharply ahead of last year when only seven per cent was setting bolls.

Pasture conditions continued to decline with 28 per cent rated poor, 44 per cent fair, 24 per cent good and four per cent excellent.

A majority of the pastures in the northern third of the state were reported in poor condition. Many farmers in that area are feeding hay or green chop to cattle, according to the service report.

Survey declares Lincoln most attractive U.S. city

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The City of Lincoln, Neb., has been declared the most attractive of 100 American cities surveyed by the Center for Applied Urban Research of the U'niversity of Nebraska at Omaha.

The center selected 80 measurable things relating to a city's economic, demographic and social environment and applied them to 100 major cities.

The center concluded that considering all factors, Lincoln was the best.

Madison, Wis., ranked second, Des Moines, Iowa, third and Omaha came in fourth. Newark, N.J., came in last.

The center ranked the cities by two methods, the first weighted each of the 80 factors equally, while the second method divided the factors into four generally categories, then weighted each category equally. The four general categories were economic factors, democraphic and environmental factors, crime factors and recreation and education factors.

By both methods, the top four and bottom, three rankings were the same. Other rankings varied.

Dr. Ralph Todd said his research intended to provide a yardstick with which to compare conditions in one city withthose in other cities. In doing that, he said, attitudes or opinions, subjective aspects that don't lend themselves to measurement, weren't used.

Instead, Dr. Todd and his researchers dealt with such things as per capita income, electricity rates, population density, divorces and numbers of books in a city's library.

It is Dr. Todd's contention that American cities have received a "bad press," and that the pessimism flowing from that has made it difficult to attract industry and people into metropolitan areas.

He is more optimistic, saying that "cities are today what they have always been — the centers of economic, social and cultural opportunity. They offer to the individual a wide variety of employment and educational opportunities, cultural and recreational diversity, police and fire protection and a wide selection of housing types and costs.

On the other hand, the study showed, eight of the 10 lowest ranked cities are concentrated along the Atlantic Coast in New Jersey, New York and Maryland and in the industrial states of Michigan and Ohio.

Dr. Todd said there doesn't seem to be a significant relationship between the population of the 100 cities and their ranking. While five of the 10 cities in the top 10 are under 250,000, four of the 10 lowest-ranked cities also had populations of less than 250,000.

There also doesn't seem to be a correlation between the year a city was founded and a city's over-all ranking, he said, although he noted it did appear that the older a city is the less economically well off it is, and the younger a city, the better its economy.

"All of these conditions contribute in varying degrees to the 'good life'. Industrial investors who demand lower costs, larger and more diversified labor pools, readily available utilities, transportation, vocational and other education programs, as well as medical and hospital facilities, would normally find the best condition in the cities. Admittedly, not all our cities are equally successful in meeting these needs of individuals and industry," he said.

For example, he said, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in 1973, had the highest per capita income ($5,485) of the 100 major cities, while San Antonio had the lowest ($2,892.)

Another example, he said is that in 1975 Lincoln had the least frequent number of robberies per 100,000 population (at 47), while Detroit had the highest with 1,597.

Dr. Todd found that five of the 10 cities with the highest composite scores are in the Great Plains region of Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Iowa. Five of the 10 are state capitals, and five had 1975 population of less than 250,000.

Carter sees 'glimmer of hope' for halting nuclear proliferation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says there is now "a glimmer of hope" that the spread of atomic weapons can be limited, even though "every step is going to be a challenge in itself."

"Six or eight months ago there was a general feeling around the world that nothing could be done, that it was too late, that the atomic genie was out of the bottle and that nobody could catch it to return it to captivity," the President said.

"But I believe there is a different feeling now, that there is a glimmer of hope that the proliferation of nations who have an explosive atomic device can be limited. Instead of having dozens of atomic nations, I think the likelihood is we won't have very many more."

Carter also said in an interview that "I don't know of any nation" which disagrees with his goal of total and orderly nuclear disarmament.

The President said that the United States has "instituted a very strong program based on two simple principles: one is an adequate supply of nuclear fuel to be used for the production of power; the other one ... is strict control over nuclear wastes and the enriched uranium inventory to prevent a transfer into explosives."

Carter said he has received some Soviet and Chinese backing for his goals of stopping the spread of nuclear weapons and, ultimately, eliminating them entirely. But he also said he hopes for even more cooperation from the two Communist giants.

He said the Soviet Union "has been very forthcoming so far" in support of proposals to control the use and development of nuclear fuels, tools and knowhow.

He said he was disappointed by Moscow's rejection of a proposal for "a drastic reduction in atomic weaponry," but added, "It is still a very real goal for my administration."

Carter said the Chinese leaders shared his goal of total nuclear disarmament. He said he had discussed Peking's views with Ambassador Huang Chen, chief of China's liaison mission in Washington.

The Chinese, Carter said, have a three-part approach to the issue: first, a world summit to discuss the subject; second, a pledge by nuclear nations against first-use of their weapons; and third, the total elimination of nuclear weapons.

"I think it is a good idea, a good approach" he said. "The first step obviously is to derive some agreement between ourselves and the Soviet Union." Carter said other nations "would be influenced heavily by what we do. We are prepared today to stop all testing of nuclear devices, both weapons and peaceful nuclear devices, if the Soviets will agree.

"I think we together are making some good progress on that subject. I think we will have a move toward the constraint on testing. Whether it is absolute, I don't know, but we would be willing, for a limited period of time, to stop all testing, hoping that the other nuclear nations would join us after they see how well the prohibition works between us and the Soviet Union."

Discussing other aspects of nuclear policy in the Oval Office interview, Carter said:

—His administration has not foreclosed the hope or possibility of terminating the contracts West Germany and France have signed to sell nuclear-reprocessing plants to Brazil and Pakistan, giving these countries the capacity to extract plutonium from waste uranium fuel. (Plutonium, a man-made element, can be used for making bombs.)

—He favors greatly strengthening the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency as a permanent world organ for nuclear supervision and control.

—He would go along with arrangements for swapping data with other nations on America's uranium inventories and mining extraction rates. But he ruled out any suggestion that there should be international ownership or control of U.S. uranium mines.

—He thinks that besides the five acknowledged nuclear weapons powers — the United States, Britain, France, the Soviet Union and China — "there are some others that are not known." He did not name any country.

—He took issue with some scientists who have contested U.S. government figures on the supply of uranium and have suggested that there may be a shortage within the next 10 to 15 years. "Nobody has a sure set of data," he said, but added: "I think we are overestimating the demand for nuclear fuels." He also said there "has never been an adequate worldwide inventory of uranium fuels." Carter added: "I think that a good estimate of demand will help. I think when we compare that with a fairly well-assured supply that we will have no shortage of uranium fuel in the next 15 or 20 years.

"At that time, of course, some form of advanced reactor technology will be necessary ... I think we can be prepared to use it safely by then."

The President, who did graduate work in nuclear physics and, while in the Navy, worked on the development of atomic submarines, said he had never witnessed a nuclear test shot. He said that while in the Navy in the early 1950s "we went through months of indoctrination on the scope of anticipated damage" from a nuclear blast. "The very clear conclusion is that once an atomic device is exploded in an area, there is no practical way to minimize the damage."

Echoing a theme he sounded through the interview, Carter said: "I think that world opinion is on the side of restraining a nuclear explosive capacity among the nonnuclear nations. Although some nations have a reluctance to be restrained, I think world opinion is still a growing factor."

Son shocks mother at funeral

MIDLAND, Mich. (AP) — "This is a hell of a place for a family reunion," said 20-year-old Steven Fairson as he walked into the funeral parlor where his mother was making arrangements — for his burial.

Fairson's mother, Jeanniene Haapala of Flint, said she thought her son had been killed in an auto accident, and admitted she was more than startled by his appearance.

"It was quite a shock," Mrs. Haapala said. "I was so weak I couldn't even stand up. I just pitched forward on the desk and cried."

Funeral director Gerald Miner also was a bit surprised.

"In 31 years in the business, I've never had the corpse walk in on me," he said.

Fairson was believed to be one of three persons killed in a fiery auto accident near Midland early Saturday.

For a time, Saginaw County deputies were unable to identify the body they originally believed to be Fairson. Later, however, the victim was identified as Bruce Beebe, 19, of Midland.

Mrs. Haapala and her husband, Raymond, answered questions about Steven's jewelry, teeth and scars for an hour and a half at a Saginaw hospital, but did not view the body because it was too badly burned, she said.

The hospital was satisfied enough with the facts to tell the Haapalas to make funeral arrangements and notify the hospital where to send the body.

While they were at the Miner-Bradley Funeral Home in Midland on Saturday, Steven's cousin, Patricia Robinson, saw Steven riding a bicycle on a street in Midland.

"I said, 'My God, what are you doing? Your mom is making funeral arrangements,'" Miss Robinson said.

He had been with all of the people in the car that crashed, but they dropped him off at his grandmother's house before the accident, his mother said.

Dry town to receive federal aid

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Federal money will finally be made available to help ease the severe water shortage Hamilton, Mo., has faced since early winter.

Mayor Russell Hailey of Hamilton, Mo., said he is confident at least a temporary solution can be found to the problem, which was compounded by the community's past inability to get federal funds to find a remedy.

Hailey's hopes were buoyed in talks with Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., and Farmers Home Administration representative John Foster at a federal assistance forum Sunday afternoon at Missouri Western State College in St. Joseph.

Hailey said the city has been rationing each of its 1,700 residents to 40 gallons of water a day for the last week, but the reservoir level keeps dropping and threatens to leave the Caldwell County community dry by Oct. 1.

Foster told the mayor that a member of his staff would be sent to Hamilton on Monday or Tuesday to help city officials fill out applications for a $240,000 loan. The money would used to lay an eight-inch pipe from Hamilton to Shoal Creek, about 12 miles away.

The city's request for a federal grant to construct an above-the-ground pipeline from the Grand River, some 18 miles away, had been rejected by the Farmers Home Administration.

"I've been running the taxpayers' phone bill up considerably in the past several months," Hailey said, adding that after nine months of unsuccessfully seeking a solution, Sunday's proposal was the first concrete response his community had received.

The city council has been issuing warnings to residents since early winter about the low water level, urging people to voluntarily conserve. A city ordinance was passed in May prohibiting washing cars and watering lawns or gardens.

Foster also said Hamilton may be able to receive a grant for a permanent pipeline, which could cost as much as $1.2 million.

If all the fluid milk sold in the United States in 1975 was poured into quart milk bottles, the bottles would stretch some 1,264,200 miles.

'Last Reveille' Succeeds

LAST REVEILLE. By David Morrell. Evans & Co. 257 Pages. $8.95.

The blending of fact with fiction to create a realistic novel is by no means a recent literary device. It's been used for many years and probably will continue to be for many more.

Usually novels of this sort come off rather well, probably because of the inherent excitement of the factual material being used. David Morrell's "Last Reveille" is a novel of this type and it comes off better than most because it is more ambitious. Rather than weaving a fictional tapestry about one specific factual incident, such as the Battle of Gettysburg, Morrell proposes to deal with the entire history of this nation's military adventures from the Civil War up through the punitive expedition sent into Mexico early in this century to chastise Pancho Villa.

Morrell does this by casting as his central character a man of near mythic proportions named Miles Calendar. Calendar's life has been one of violence.

Service center opened to help consumers

By SUE A. MERKNER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — A new consumer service center has been established for Missouri residents with problems, complaints or requests for information about consumer affairs.

The goal of the consumer service center is to "increase the competency of consumers," said Dave Doelling, director of the consumer information center.

Consumers with complaints first are encouraged to contact the business involved directly to work out a solution, but if no agreement can be reached, the consumer may contact the service center for help, Doelling said.

Although the center prefers complaints be put into writing to insure "fairness to both sides and maximum accuracy," he said, persons also may telephone or talk directly with the Missouri Consumer Information Center, Department of Consumer Affairs, Jefferson City.

The information center will review consumer requests and forward them to the appropriate state, federal or local agencies for response, said James L. Sullivan, Missouri director of consumer affairs.

"We're concerned that many Missourians do not believe they have a place to go if they need information or assistance," he said. "While there are Better Business Bureaus and federal and local agencies, often consumers don't know the proper place to write for help."

The information center will monitor inquiries and problems to determine if more general action is needed rather than solving an isolated problem.

"Some types of problems are likely to be experienced by large numbers of people," Doelling said. "In those cases, we may issue a consumer alert, warning people of the problem."

Regional problems affecting many people in one area of the state also may be cause for a consumer alert, Doelling said. "There was one case of a group of gypsies selling a black top service for driveways that turned out to be black paint that washed away with the first rainfall," he said.

"If a reputable businessman wants to stay in business, he will make every effort to be fair to his customers," Doelling said. "That's our main concern — fairness, for both the consumer and the businessman."

A recent national public opinion study revealed consumer concerns similar to those in Missouri, Sullivan said. The Marketing Science Institute of the Harvard Business School in Conjunction with Louis Harris and Associates surveyed the general public, consumer groups, business and regulators, including regulatory officials in Missouri.

The study showed consumers are most worried about the high price of many products and services, the high costs of medical and hospital care, the poor quality of products and the failure of many products to live up to their advertising.

Those surveyed named several industries and services doing a poor job serving consumers. Most frequently mentioned were car manufacturers, auto repair shops, the oil industry, used car dealers, hospitals, the medical profession, electric utility companies, loan companies and the advertising industry.

The study also showed that people feel the consumer movement has helped them develop better shopping skills and has improved product labeling and safety.

However, the majority of those surveyed also said they get a worse deal now in the marketplace than they did ten years ago. They also said the quality of goods and services has declined.

Seventy-three per cent said products do not last as long as they used to, and 64 per cent said it is now more difficult to get things repaired.

The study also showed that consumers find it difficult to get assistance with problems or complaints about things they buy and use.

Survival, Aspirations Detailed

AMERICAN HUNGER. By Richard Wright. Harper & Row. 147 Pages. $8.95.

When Richard Wright's powerful autobiography, "Black Boy," was published in 1945, the pages that now make up "American Hunger" were supposed to be part of that book. For some reason, they were not included and "Black Boy" ended with Wright deciding to leave the South for a new life in the North.

"American Hunger" begins with Wright's arrival in Chicago in 1927 and details in highly personal prose the aspiring black writer's efforts to become a writer as well as to survive in an untriendly city during the worst years of the Great Depression.

Working at any job that he could get — porter, dishwasher, parttime mail clerk, janitor — Wright struggled to feed himself and his family and once, while unemployed, he forced himself to go to a relief station "to plead for bread," an action that made him "burn with shame."

When he could, he wrote. "But I always somehow failed to get onto the page what I thought and felt. Failing at sustained narrative, I compromised by playing with single sentences and phrases. I spent hours and days pounding out disconnected sentences for the sheer love of words." Discouraged, but in no way defeated, he kept doggedly on and eventually produced such notable books as "Native Son" and "Uncle Tom's Children."

"I wanted," Wright wrote, "to try to build a bridge of words between me and that world outside, that world which was so distant and elusive that it seemed unreal."

"American Hunger" also sensitively depicts Wright's feelings about being a black man in a largely white society and details his early attraction to the Communist party and his ultimate rejection of it.

Kidnap suspects arrested

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The suspected kidnapers of Fiat executive Luchino Revelli-Beaumont have been arrested in Spain and a $2 million ransom has been recovered in Switzerland, official sources here and in Paris said today.

Madrid police sources said the suspects, six Latin Americans, including a woman, were arrested here and in the southern city of Malaga. The French sources identified them as Argentinians.

Revelli-Beaumont, who headed French operations of the giant Italian automotive firm, was kidnaped by four armed assailants April 13 in front of his home in a wealthy section of Paris. He was released, in good health, July 11 after 89 days of captivity and the payment of the ransom.

The Paris sources said French authorities had already asked for extradition of the alleged kidnap team. The six were to be turned over to Spanish judicial authorities later today, the sources here said.

Madrid police said an official statement on the arrests might be made later today.

A group calling itself "Committee for Socialist Revolutionary Unity" had claimed responsibility for the abduction of the 58-year-old businessman. It said in a communique that the kidnaping was a victory for "all the exploited" workers of Fiat companies worldwide.

There was no immediate word whether those arrested belonged to a revolutionary movement.

CANCER Answerline

American Cancer Society

A regular feature, prepared by the American Cancer Society to help save your life from cancer.

A young father asks: "What should I look for in an insurance policy to cover medical costs if cancer strikes me or my family?"

ANSWERline: Here are some key points to look for: (1) the length of hospitalization coverage which should be at least 30 days, (2) whether there is coverage for cancer treatment given outside of the hospital, e.g. chemotherapy or radiation therapy, (3) whether or not it's worthwhile to accept a high deductible amount before coverage begins in return for better longterm coverage, (4) whether there are benefits for home care situations, e.g. visiting nurses or homemakers, (5) know when you must pick up a share of the hospital costs. The American Cancer Society believes that a carefully chosen general medical insurance policy is better than special so-called "cancer insurance" policies which may unnecessarily duplicate the coverage a person may receive from a regular policy — and at extra cost.

A high school teacher writes: "Are there any trends that indicate we can make a dent in cigarette smoking among teenagers?"

ANSWERline: Yes. A recent nationwide study by the American Cancer Society pointed to some encouraging signs. First of all, cigarette smoking is a minority phenomenon among the young, and the hazards of cigarettes are known. Also, young people value physical fitness and self-control, traits that don't fit in well with entrapment by the cigarette habit. Young people tend to favor stricter anti-smoking regulations, and, young people who don't smoke tend to exert pressure on their friends who do. All of these points are pluses to keep in mind when discussing cigarette smoking with young people. A copy of "Cigarette Smoking Among Teen-agers and Young Women" is available free of charge from your local American Cancer Society Unit if you want more information.

COOL DUO: CRANBERRY AND TEA

Here's a repertoire of refreshing beverages combining ruby red cranberry juice drinks blended with amber tea. As tasteful thirst quenchers, each can stand on its own for good flavor, but together cranberry juice drinks and tea mixed are a delectable combination. Serve them at home with pretty garnishes, or take along a thermos for a picnic.

TEABERRY TINGLER
(Makes 6 servings)

- 2 cups Ocean Spray cranberry juice cocktail
- 3 envelopes lemon-flavored iced tea mix
- 1 pint ginger ale, chilled

Fresh strawberries

Mix cranberry juice cocktail with 1 envelope iced tea mix and 2 cups water. Pour mixture into ice cube trays and freeze until hard. When ready to serve, mix remaining iced tea mix with 4 cups water. Slowly stir in gingerale, divide cranberry tea ice cubes among 6 tall glasses. Fill glasses with iced tea mixture. Add skewers speared with fresh strawberries. Serve at once.

SCARLET SWIRL
(Serves 6)

- 3 cups Ocean Spray cranberry juice cocktail, chilled
- 2 thin lemon slices
- 6 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon instant tea
- 24 large ice cubes

In covered blender container blend 1½ cups cranberry juice cocktail, 1 lemon slice, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1½ teaspoons instant tea until almost smooth. Scrape down sides of blender and blend again at the highest speed until very smooth. Remove center of cover (or cover) and add 12 ice cubes, one at a time, blend until ice is finely crushed. Pour out. Repeat with remaining ingredients. Spoon into 6 small glasses and serve with short straws. (Can also be prepared ahead and spooned into a freezer container and stored covered until needed.)

ICED APPLE BERRY TEA
(Makes 6 servings)

- 4 teabags
- 2 cups boiling water

RADAR PLANES FOR THE SHAH?

Jimmy Carter campaigned for office on a promise to establish new policies for arms sales to foreign governments. No longer would the U.S. be arms merchant to the world, candidate Carter said, and for the most part President Carter has lived up to this sensible promise.

Unfortunately, the Administration now has announced its first major departure from the new arms policy -- namely, the proposed sale of seven AWACS radar planes to Iran. AWACS stands for Airborne Warning and Control System, military jargon for a Boeing 707 topped by a huge, rotating radar dish and loaded with tens of millions of dollars worth of our most sophisticated and esoteric radar, communications and computer equipment. The Shah, who has purchased more than $10 billion worth of American arms since 1972, is offering $1.2 billion for the radar planes.

I have introduced a Congressional resolution (co-sponsored by 15 other Senators) to block this sale. We have nothing to gain, and great deal to lose, by going through with the deal.

Iran is oil-rich, and the Shah can afford to buy all of the weapons he wants. But he cannot operate these weapons systems himself. Rich as Iran is, it still is but a semi-developed nation. Only four out of every ten Iranians can even read or write; they hardly are capable of handling sophisticated American technology. Consequently, the Shah also has imported some 30,000 American technicians to operate his weapons, pump his oil, build his cities, etc.

The AWACS system would be the most complex piece of hardware ever to hit Iran, a piece of hardware the Shah could not hope to operate without even more American technicians. In the event of hostilities, this would put us in a very ticklish position: either we allow American technicians to fight a foreign war, or we withdraw our personnel and assure the Shah's defeat.

The AWACS sale also poses a very real threat to our military security. Iran shares a 1,200-mile border with the Soviet Union, and security along that border is less than air-tight. It is not inconceivable that a hostile government could acquire some of the secret systems aboard AWACS through espionage, sabotage or theft. Even simple reproductions of AWACS' highly-classified technical manuals would be an intelligence coup for a foreign power. If, as the President recently decided, it is unwise to sell advanced civilian computers to the Soviets, surely it would be the height of folly to place within Russia's easy grasp the largest airborne military computer ever flown.

Kidnap suspects arrested

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The suspected kidnapers of Fiat executive Luchino Revelli-Beaumont have been arrested in Spain and a $2 million ransom has been recovered in Switzerland, official sources here and in Paris said today.

Madrid police sources said the suspects, six Latin Americans, including a woman, were arrested here and in the southern city of Malaga. The French sources identified them as Argentinians.

Revelli-Beaumont, who headed French operations of the giant Italian automotive firm, was kidnaped by four armed assailants April 13 in front of his home in a wealthy section of Paris. He was released, in good health, July 11 after 89 days of captivity and the payment of the ransom.

The Paris sources said French authorities had already asked for extradition of the alleged kidnap team. The six were to be turned over to Spanish judicial authorities later today, the sources here said.

Madrid police said an official statement on the arrests might be made later today.

A group calling itself "Committee for Socialist Revolutionary Unity" had claimed responsibility for the abduction of the 58-year-old businessman. It said in a communique that the kidnaping was a victory for "all the exploited" workers of Fiat companies worldwide.

There was no immediate word whether those arrested belonged to a revolutionary movement.

CANCER Answer line

American Cancer Society

A regular feature, prepared by the American Cancer Society to help save your life from cancer.

A young father asks: "What should I look for in an insurance policy to cover medical costs if cancer strikes me or my family?"

ANSWERline: Here are some key points to look for: (1) the length of hospitalization coverage which should be at least 30 days, (2) whether there is coverage for cancer treatment given outside of the hospital, e.g. chemotherapy or radiation therapy, (3) whether or not it's worthwhile to accept a high deductible amount before coverage begins in return for better longterm coverage, (4) whether there are benefits for home care situations, e.g. visiting nurses or homemakers, (5) know when you must pick up a share of the hospital costs. The American Cancer Society believes that a carefully chosen general medical insurance policy is better than special so-called "cancer insurance" policies which may unnecessarily duplicate the coverage a person may receive from a regular policy – and at extra cost.

A high school teacher writes: "Are there any trends that indicate we can make a dent in cigarette smoking among teenagers?"

ANSWERline: Yes. A recent nationwide study by the American Cancer Society pointed to some encouraging signs. First of all, cigarette smoking is a minority phenomenon among the young, and the hazards of cigarettes are known. Also, young people value physical fitness and self-control, traits that don't fit in well with entrapment by the cigarette habit. Young people tend to favor stricter anti-smoking regulations, and, young people who don't smoke tend to exert pressure on their friends who do. All of these points are pluses to keep in mind when discussing cigarette smoking with young people. A copy of "Cigarette Smoking Among Teen-agers and Young Women" is available free of charge from your local American Cancer Society Unit if you want more information.

COOL DUO: CRANBERRY AND TEA

Here's a repertoire of refreshing beverages combining ruby red cranberry juice drinks blended with amber tea. As tasteful thirst quenchers, each can stand on its own for good flavor, but together cranberry juice drinks and tea mixed are a delectable combination. Serve them at home with pretty garnishes, or take along a thermos for a picnic.

TEABERRY TINGLER
(Makes 6 servings)

- 2 cups Ocean Spray cranberry juice cocktail
- 3 envelopes lemon-flavored iced tea mix
- 1 pint ginger ale, chilled
- Fresh strawberries

Mix cranberry juice cocktail with 1 envelope iced tea mix and 2 cups water. Pour mixture into ice cube trays and freeze until hard. When ready to serve, mix remaining iced tea mix with 4 cups water. Slowly stir in gingerale, divide cranberry tea ice cubes among 6 tall glasses. Fill glasses with iced tea mixture. Add skewers speared with fresh strawberries. Serve at once.

SCARLET SWIRL
(Serves 6)

- 3 cups Ocean Spray cranberry juice cocktail, chilled
- 2 thin lemon slices
- 6 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon instant tea
- 24 large ice cubes

In covered blender container blend 1½ cups cranberry juice cocktail, 1 lemon slice, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1½ teaspoons instant tea until almost smooth. Scrape down sides of blender and blend again at the highest speed until very smooth. Remove center of cover (or cover) and add 12 ice cubes, one at a time, blend until ice is finely crushed. Pour out. Repeat with remaining ingredients. Spoon into 6 small glasses and serve with short straws. (Can also be prepared ahead and spooned into a freezer container and stored covered until needed.)

- 4 teabags
- 2 cups boiling water
- 4 cups Ocean Spray cranberry-apple drink

BOOK REVIEW

STREET 8. By Douglas Fairbairn. Delacorte. 205 Pages. $7.95.

WITH A VENGEANCE. By Gerald DiPego. McGraw-Hill. 262 Pages. $8.95.

One of the more recent growths in the fiction garden is a rather odd form that might be called the "gratuitous novel."

The genre features a rather thin, although sometimes mildly interesting, plot line that isn't quite strong enough to hold the reader's interest by itself and so is fattened up with the insertion of gratuitous material that isn't really necessary to the story being told.

Both "Street 8" and "With A Vengeance" would have been much better novels if the authors had logically added to their plots rather than adding unwarranted material to them.

The theme of Douglas Fairbairn's book is a provocative one. It deals with the Cubans who have abandoned Castro Cuba to resettle in Miami and the political infighting that goes on among the various groups of exiles. But rather than telling the story from the Cuban point of view, Fairbairn has chosen instead to make his protagonist a non-Cuban named Bobby Mead, a native of Miami who runs a used car lot in what has become the Cuban district.

Mead inadvertently becomes involved with the violent wing of the Cuban political activists and is drawn, unwillingly, into their activities. This idea is not at all believable, at least in the way it is presented here, and is further weakened by the author's dumping in of chunks of material dealing with forbidden love, X-rated movies, and graphic sex that has little, if any, relation to the plot.

Gerald DiPego's "With A Vengeance" also has a provocative theme. After waiting 20 years, a meak-mannered college professor named Stephen Nye sets out to destroy the children of the men who were responsible for the death of his son in a fraternity hazing. But after getting off to a promising start, the book soon bogs down in extraneous material. Again too much space is given to unnecessary sex scenes, hallucinatory conversations Nye has with his long dead son, and police conversations with Nye's divorced wife. None of this adds to the story and only serves to blunt the drive of what should be an onrushing plot.

BOOK REVIEW

STREET 8. By Douglas Fairbairn. Delacorte. 205 Pages. $7.95.

WITH A VENGEANCE. By Gerald DiPego. McGraw-Hill. 262 Pages. $8.95.

One of the more recent growths in the fiction garden is a rather odd form that might be called the "gratuitous novel."

The genre features a rather thin, although sometimes mildly interesting, plot line that isn't quite strong enough to hold the reader's interest by itself and so is fattened up with the insertion of gratuitous material that isn't really necessary to the story being told.

Both "Street 8" and "With A Vengeance" would have been much better novels if the authors had logically added to their plots rather than adding unwarranted material to them.

The theme of Douglas Fairbairn's book is a provocative one. It deals with the Cubans who have abandoned Castro Cuba to resettle in Miami and the political infighting that goes on among the various groups of exiles. But rather than telling the story from the Cuban point of view, Fairbairn has chosen instead to make his protagonist a non-Cuban named Bobby Mead, a native of Miami who runs a used car lot in what has become the Cuban district.

Mead inadvertently becomes involved with the violent wing of the Cuban political activists and is drawn, unwillingly, into their activities. This idea is not at all believable, at least in the way it is presented here, and is further weakened by the author's dumping in of chunks of material dealing with forbidden love, X-rated movies, and graphic sex that has little, if any, relation to the plot.

Gerald DiPego's "With A Vengeance" also has a provocative theme. After waiting 20 years, a meak-mannered college professor named Stephen Nye sets out to destroy the children of the men who were responsible for the death of his son in a fraternity hazing. But after getting off to a promising start, the book soon bogs down in extraneous material. Again too much space is given to unnecessary sex scenes, hallucinatory conversations Nye has with his long dead son, and police conversations with Nye's divorced wife. None of this adds to the story and only serves to blunt the drive of what should be an onrushing plot.

Some sleep less as they grow older — others just lie awake worrying more.

Add to your collection of collective nouns: A petty of nit-pickers.

And then there's the fellow who kept his dog upstairs to make sure he always had a woof over his head.

Making ends meet is no problem — it's keeping a middle that causes difficulties.

1. What is the most significant hazard in CB & TV antenna installation?
   A. Steep Roof
   B. Securing the antenna to the roof
   C. Touching the antenna to an overhead power line.
2. Antennas act as a lightning rod, and, therefore, protect the house.
   ☐ True ☐ False

ANSWERS

1. C. Even qualified technicians have made the fatal mistake of contacting an extremely deadly overhead power lines with the metal antenna or mast. The slightest contact could cause injury or electrocution.
2. FALSE. Antenna discharge devices, which should be part of each installation, are not designed to give lightning protection to the house. Suspect arraigned in slayings

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — The man accused of massacreing his foster brother's family in Connecticut's worst mass killing stood silently through a brief court hearing today at which his arraignment was delayed until Aug. 2.

Lorne Acquin, a 27-year-old ex-convict, wore dungarees and a T-shirt emblazoned with the words "Miami Beach" at the proceedings before Superior Court Judge Francis O'Brien.

He is charged with the murders of Frederick Beaudoin's wife, seven children and a niece. He is also charged with arson in connection with a fire that destroyed the family's home in nearby Prospect.

Attorney John Williams, who said he wants to be appointed a special public defender to represent Acquin, asked Superior Court Judge Francis O'Brien for the continuance because he had not seen the arrest warrant.

The judge rejected a request by Asst. State's Attorney Walter Scanlon for an increase in the bond from $250,000 to $1 million.

Williams, who has accused police of "gross misheavior" in the investigation, said Acquin will probably remain in custody because he will be unable to raise the bond.

State police have refused comment on Williams' allegations or on a published report that Acquin told them he bludgeoned his victims with a tire iron and then set their home on fire with gasoline early Friday.

The report in the Sunday editions of the The New Haven Register quoted sources as saying Acquin, who had lived several years ago with the Beaudoin family, told state police he arrived at the Beaudoin home between 2:30 and 3:30 a.m. Friday.

The Register quoted the sources as saying that Acquin told police he talked in the kitchen with Beaudoin's wife, Cheryl, 29. Beaudoin was at work on the night shift at Pratt & Whitney aerospace plant in New Haven.

After the fire, investigators found her body in the kitchen.

An autopsy indicated that she had died of head injuries and a stab wound to the chest, Chief State Medical Examiner Elliot Gross said Sunday.

Six of the Beaudoin children died from smoke inhalation and head injuries from a "blunt force," while the seventh died of head injuries, the autopsy report said.

An autopsy was to be performed today on the ninth victim, Jennifer Santoro, 6, a Beaudoin niece who was spending the night at their home.

New number for ambulance

BLOOMFIELD – The Stoddard County ambulance Service is now dispatched through the Stoddard County Sheriff's Office, and there is a new phone number for ambulance service.

The new number for those requesting an ambulance is 568-4616.

The ambulance district service had been dispatched through the Dexter Memorial Hospital. An extra person has been hired for night duty in the sheriff's office, handling primarily ambulance service.

WRITING GRANTS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 400 books of poetry and fiction will be produced this year with grants from the Small Press Program of the National Endowment for the Arts.

The grants total $345,460 and were made to 112 small independent printing presses in 26 states and the District of Columbia.

Suspect arraigned in slayings

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — The man accused of massacreing his foster brother's family in Connecticut's worst mass killing stood silently through a brief court hearing today at which his arraignment was delayed until Aug. 2.

Lorne Acquin, a 27-year-old ex-convict, wore dungarees and a T-shirt emblazoned with the words "Miami Beach" at the proceedings before Superior Court Judge Francis O'Brien.

He is charged with the murders of Frederick Beaudoin's wife, seven children and a niece. He is also charged with arson in connection with a fire that destroyed the family's home in nearby Prospect.

Attorney John Williams, who said he wants to be appointed a special public defender to represent Acquin, asked Superior Court Judge Francis O'Brien for the continuance because he had not seen the arrest warrant.

The judge rejected a request by Asst. State's Attorney Walter Scanlon for an increase in the bond from $250,000 to $1 million.

Williams, who has accused police of "gross misheavior" in the investigation, said Acquin will probably remain in custody because he will be unable to raise the bond.

State police have refused comment on Williams' allegations or on a published report that Acquin told them he bludgeoned his victims with a tire iron and then set their home on fire with gasoline early Friday.

The report in the Sunday editions of the The New Haven Register quoted sources as saying Acquin, who had lived several years ago with the Beaudoin family, told state police he arrived at the Beaudoin home between 2:30 and 3:30 a.m. Friday.

The Register quoted the sources as saying that Acquin told police he talked in the kitchen with Beaudoin's wife, Cheryl, 29. Beaudoin was at work on the night shift at Pratt & Whitney aerospace plant in New Haven.

After the fire, investigators found her body in the kitchen.

An autopsy indicated that she had died of head injuries and a stab wound to the chest, Chief State Medical Examiner Elliot Gross said Sunday.

Six of the Beaudoin children died from smoke inhalation and head injuries from a "blunt force," while the seventh died of head injuries, the autopsy report said.

An autopsy was to be performed today on the ninth victim, Jennifer Santoro, 6, a Beaudoin niece who was spending the night at their home.

A Carter embarrassment

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — President Carter's effort to reward a controversial political supporter with a $50,000-a-year job on a federal regulatory commission already has produced embarrassment in the White House and probably will lead to rejection of the nomination in the Senate.

There has been previous Senate resistance to a handful of Carter nominees, but each of those cases involved substantive differences over public policy. The new case, however, represents the first time the personal integrity of a Carter nominee has been called into question.

The focus of that little-publicized but fast-growing dispute is Donald L. Tucker, the autocratic Speaker of the House in the Florida legislature and the first Democratic officeholder in the state to endorse Carter prior to the crucial 1976 Florida presidential primary.

On June 16, Carter nominated Tucker to be one of five members of the Civil Aeronautics Board, which regulates the nation's aviation industry. But the Senate Commerce Committee, which must confirm the nomination, took no action on it for almost a month.

At the request of Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., chairman of the committee's aviation subcommittee, the full committee met in an extraordinary secret session on July 14 for the sole purpose of examining the results of the Federal Bureau of Investigation probe of Tucker's background.

When grim-faced committee members emerged from the 70-minute meeting, they refused to discuss what transpired except to announce that they had scheduled a public hearing on the Tucker selection for Sept. 13.

The Democratic-dominated Senate has quickly and routinely approved almost all of Democrat Carter's previous nominations. The requisite committee hearings invariably are cut-and-dried affairs, seldom lasting more than a few hours.

But the committee's highly unusual postponement of hearings for almost two months was the tipoff to its reservations about Tucker's integrity, as was a Miami newspaper report several days earlier that Cannon "has told some of his colleagues privately that he saw enough in the FBI reports to make him wonder why the White House is going through with the nomination."

The content of the FBI reports remains secret, but numerous investigative stories in Florida's major newspapers in recent years raise serious questions about Tucker's ethics and conduct.

According to one account, a land development partnership in which Tucker was a member received preferential treatment in obtaining a $200,000 bank loan in May 1975 while Tucker was maneuvering the Florida House into approving a previously stalled bill to permit branch banking.

Leading the lobbying for the legislation was the Florida Bankers Association, whose president at the time also was president of the bank which granted the disputed loan to Tucker's group.

Another newspaper story disclosed last autumn that Tucker had purchased for his new office in the State Capitol a $4,429 desk and matching $4,002 credenza. After that revelation, Tucker almost was defeated in his bid for reelection by an unknown Republican.

Tucker's current financial statement indicates that he converted to his personal use more than $70,000 collected at a political "appreciation dinner" last year — a practice legal in Florida but hardly reflective of the high ethical standards Carter repeatedly has insisted upon for all federal officials.

Members of the White House staff who normally are highly loyal to the President already are privately expressing chagrin about the Tucker selection and are pointedly referring to it as "the President's nomination" to personally repay a political debt.

The St. Petersburg Times, one of Florida's most respected newspapers, summed up the case against Tucker in an editorial opposing his confirmation: "Tucker has made himself a reputation in Tallahassee (the state capital) as a wheeler-dealer politician."

High blood calcium

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I need your opinion and any information you can give me. What causes the parathyroid glands to malfunction and form an excess amount of calcium that flows into the blood stream? How harmful is this excess? It was suggested that all dairy products, liver, fish and vitamins A and D be eliminated from my diet. What can be done to avoid this excess calcium?

DEAR READER — The parathyroid glands are on each side of the thyroid gland around your trachea (wind pipe) in your throat. The hormone they form causes calcium to be mobilized from the bones and does increase the calcium content in the blood. The glands do not form calcium themselves. They work with vitamin D and your calcium intake to help regulate your blood calcium level.

Over active parathyroid glands produce too much hormone that can mobilize calcium from your bones. That results in a high blood calcium and may cause your bones to fracture easily. The excess calcium may also cause kidney stones, and may increase the acid digestive juices from the stomach causing digestive complaints. This combination has led doctors to say the hyperparathyroid state is a disease of bones, stones and groans.

Sometimes this overactivity is caused by some other disease in the body. Some forms of kidney disease and diseases that interfere with the absorption of calcium from your digestive system are examples of underlying diseases that may cause an over active parathyroid gland.

Other cases are caused by a small tumor (rarely malignant) that causes over production of the hormone.

The ideal treatment depends upon the cause. If there is a small tumor of the parathyroid glands the treatment is surgical.

If the over activity is secondary to another underlying disease the treatment is directed toward trying to correct that abnormality.

I am a bit puzzled by your dietary advice. Cutting down your calcium intake will not help. If surgery is not needed or the underlying problem is not completely correctable then it is usually wise to direct treatment efforts toward replacing lost chemical salts which may even include replacing calcium and phosphorous. Most important of all it is advisable to drink plenty of fluids every day, spaced throughout the 24 hour period to ensure a continuous passage of dilute urine. This will help prevent kidney stones.

I think you would be wise to ask your doctor to refer you to an endocrinologist for a consultation. I see from your address that the city you live in has a university medical center. You could be referred to the endocrinology section there. Management of such cases is often complicated and they may be able to help your doctor with your case.
